Norris Agrees To TVA Quiz By Congress; Hits Quarrels

Fight for Control Injurious, He Says

McNary Finds Record of Millions Spent Is 'Unavailable.'

By Sidney Olson.

The father of the Tennessee Valley Authority, Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, said yesterday he "will not oppose" a congressional investigation of the TVA.

Norris, discussing the "squabbles over a period of years" between TVA Chairman A. E. Morgan, on one side, and Authority Members David Lilienthal and Harcourt Morgan, on the other, said that while he felt all differences gradually would be reconciled, "there is no question but that the quarrels have hurt the TVA."

Chairman Morgan came near to inviting a Congressional inquiry last week after a row with other members, when he said he had "other evidence" which "should be withheld now as not pertinent to the Berry case, but which would be available if there should be a Congressional investigation."

Noncommittal on Berry.

Norris was chary of comment on litigation in which Senator George L. Berry, millionaire head of the International Printing Pressmen's Union and former chairman of Labor's Non-Partisan League, is seeking reimbursement from the Government for what he claims are millions of dollars' worth of marble deposits now at the bottom of Norris Dam Reservoir.

He agreed that "it might be well to make all facts known" about the Berry claim that the marble beneath the waters is of the finest type. TVA experts insist the marble is worthless and have brought testimony before a Federal commission in Knoxville, Tenn., to show that Berry and his partners leased at least a portion of the marble quarry lands only a few days before the President signed the TVA act, after it had passed through Congress.

But Norris would not say an inquiry into TVA, now being studied in some Congressional quarters, should be broadened to include an airing of the Berry leases.

Records "Unavailable."

The silver-haired Nebraskan said he knew "all about the TVA differences," and expressed the opinion that the former three-man board set-up under which one member was the directing engineer, one the directing chemist and one member the legal counsel, had been largely responsible for the bitter inside battle for control over policy.

"The new system, under which the three act as a board with a general manager under them, should work out much better," he said.

Meanwhile, Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, minority leader

Carol Will Seek To Be Dictator, Diplomats Say

Titulescu Flees Fascists for Life; Mme. Lupescu on Death List.

By the United Press.

Bucharest, Rumania, Dec. 27.—King Carol II, shorn of parliamentary support in last week's elections, is planning a royal dictatorship, diplomats reported today.

Premier George Tatarescu, advocate of Rumanian adherence to the Rome-Berlin axis, submitted the resignation of his Cabinet yesterday when the National Liberal Party failed to obtain the necessary majority of votes.

May Call On Army.

The King, cutting short a vacation at his Sinaia winter resort, rushed to Bucharest to attempt to mobilize support for Tatarescu. But little minority support could be found to permit him to retain Tatarescu as premier.

Carol then summoned Octavian Goga, leader of the extreme Fascist and anti-Semitic National Christian Party, and Gen. Johann Antonescu, commander of the Fourth Army Corps.

Results of the conversations were not known, but diplomatic observers believed Carol would entrust Goga with formation of a new government and would instruct him to include enough army generals in his cabinet to rule the country without parliament if a parliamentary majority can not be secured.

Titulescu in Flight.

It was reported that Goga insisted the National Christian platform of close co-operation with Fascist countries, severance of relations with Russia and adherance to the anti-communist pact for expropriation of all Jewish-owned lands be made a part of the new governmental program.

At the same time Nicolas Titulescu, 54-year-old former foreign minister who returned from 18 months of self-imposed exile and won a seat in Parliament, was reported to have fled to Vienna after Fascist threats against his life.

Mme. Magda Lupescu, red-haired Jewish friend of King Carol, also is on the list of those marked for death.

Borah Flays Dickering in Trust Cases

Compromises Held 'All Wrong' After Law Is Invoked.

Blast Directed at Suit in Which Judge Has Been Cited.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, in an attack on use of consent decrees by the Government in prosecution of anti-trust cases, denounced "this dickering behind the scenes" as "demoralizing in every sense of the word."

A Milwaukee citizen, Gifford Vermillion, had written Borah about the recent dismissal, by Judge Ferdinand A. Geiger, of that city, of a grand jury in advance of its report on an investigation of automobile finance companies. Borah's remarks were made in a letter to Vermillion, and amounted to an indirect assault on the position of the Justice Department, as Attorney General Cummings has cited Geiger to the House Judiciary Committee, where impeachment proceedings begin, because of the dismissal.

Held "All Wrong."

Geiger dismissed the grand jury December 17 because of what he termed impropriety of the Justice Department's suggestion of consent decrees—apparent compromises—in a case on which the jury had once voted to return indictments.

Borah said: "These consent decrees—especially where they are made after the guilty parties have come within the clutches of the law, are all wrong.

"To have the Government accept consent decrees and turn violators loose to prey upon these small business interests anew is just simply intolerable.

"Consent decrees do not stop violations of the law.

"The idea unfortunately prevails in this country that you cannot convict a million dollars.

"If the Government has no case against these powerful corporations and their leaders, of course, they ought not to be punished.

Jurist Is Cited.

"But if the Government has a case—and in this case there was strong evidence it did have, because the grand jury had voted the indictment—then the only thing is to prosecute them to the bitter end."

Cummings had cited Judge Geiger to the House committee directly after the Milwaukee jurist had summarily dismissed the grand jury after its probe into the practices of automobile finance companies connected with General Motors Corporation, Ford Motor Co. and the Chrysler corporation.

The Attorney General called Geiger's conduct "obstructive to the

Heflin, Stricken With Pneumonia, Cancels Speeches

Lafayette, Ala., Dec. 27 (AP).—J. Thomas Heflin, 68, sharp-tongued former Alabama Senator, lay ill tonight of lobar pneumonia, but physicians said he was responding to treatment and expressed belief he would recover.

Heflin, in the midst of a comeback campaign from his 1930 defeat, was forced to cancel speaking engagements in a race which will culminate in a Democratic primary January 4. He is one of three seeking nomination to succeed Senator Dixie Graves, serving temporarily since Hugo L. Black became a Supreme Court member.

Drs. N. A. Wheeler and W. D. Gaines, attending physicians, issued a statement describing Heflin as "a very sick man," but Dr. Gaines later said he did not consider the former Senator's condition immediately dangerous and expressed belief he would be able to vote next week.

Kellogg Held Leader Who DaredDream

The body of Frank Billings Kellogg, who, as Assistant Attorney General, United States Senator and Secretary of State, spent more than ten years in the National Capital, was laid to rest yesterday afternoon in the Chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea in Washington Cathedral.

Before the bronze casket was lowered beneath the chapel's stone floor, a congregation composed of State Department officials, members of the Diplomatic Corps, relatives, friends and former co-workers of Mr. Kellogg heard him characterized by Bishop James E. Freeman as "a statesman who dared to dream."

"His dream must come true," the bishop said. "Then will come an age more golden than that of Pericles."

Marking the coincidence of the former Secretary of State's death four days before Christmas, Bishop Freeman called him a servant of "that ideal of world order and peace for which the Prince of Peace came to the earth centuries ago."

In his informal sermon, Bishop Freeman recalled a long and intimate friendship with Mr. Kellogg.

"I have always been impressed with my friend's modesty and self-effacement. He wore his multiplying honors with humility. Of all the distinctions he prized, though he sought no praise for it, the greatest was his share in the conclusion of the Kellogg-Briand peace pact."

Before the bishop's sermon, the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington, read the lesson from the First Epistle to the Corinthians: 15, 20-58.

Bishop Freeman opened the service with the first office of the Episcopalian burial service, "I am the resurrection and the life . . ."

The words rang through the unfinished Cathedral as the ecclesiastical procession moved up the center aisle of the choir toward the altar. Preceding the bishop were James P. Berkley, Cathedral verger; the Rev. Dr. Edwin B. Niver, Canon Raymond L. Wolven, Canon Anson Phelps Stokes and Dean Powell.

Only hymn in the service was "The Strife Is O'er, the Battle Done," sung at the last rites for Woodrow Wilson and other national leaders who lie in the Cathedral. The 121st Psalm, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills," was chanted by the Cathedral choir.

Covered with a spray of lilies from the statesman's widow, the casket stood before the altar rail for the public service. Banked along the rail, on either side of the

Tsingtao's Fall Near, Americans Flee; U. S. Denies Panay Secrets

All Tokyo's Guarantees Published, State Department Says.

Basis of Report Puzzling to Hull

Oral Pledges to Grew Mentioned as Possible, Doubted in D. C.

As this Government's diplomatic agents watched with increasing intensity to see whether Japan will live up to its new pledge to observe American rights in China, State Department attaches yesterday emphatically denied existence of any secret agreement or undertaking between the United States and the Tokyo government in the settlement of the sinking of the gunboat Panay.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull asserted he did not know to what dispatches from Tokyo referred when they mentioned that further guarantees, more specific than those contained in the Japanese reply to this country's protests, had been given to the United States and that these further guarantees were being held in confidence by the two governments.

Attaches of the department asserted all the guarantees given to the United States by Japan were contained in the note of the latter government made public here on Saturday and that there were no undertakings supplemental to that communication.

May Have Referred to Japan.

In one quarter, it was believed the Tokyo dispatch telling of undisclosed further guarantees had reference either to conversations which took place on Thursday between Ambassador Joseph C. Grew and Japanese military and naval authorities or to the fact that the Japanese government withheld from its own press a full account of the reply sent to the United States.

As regards the latter, it was learned the Japanese foreign office made available to its own press only a resume of the note sent to the United States and that this resume contained only a passing reference to the rather elaborate assurances of respect for American lives and interests in China. It placed emphasis on the Japanese

Panay Attack Film Due in U. S. Today On China Clipper

San Francisco, Dec. 27 (AP).—Pan American Airways announced its China Clipper left Honolulu at 6:43 p. m. (Eastern standard time) today for Alameda, Calif., carrying Norman Alley, news reel photographer, and 4,500 feet of film he took of the bombing of the U. S. S. Panay in the Yangtze River.

The film, to be turned over to the State Department in Washington, and then released for public showing, will be flown East tomorrow by special plane.

The China Clipper was expected to reach the Alameda base between 10 and 11 a. m. tomorrow. Pan American Airways said, however, if fog persisted along the coast off San Francisco, the Clipper would be instructed to alight in San Pedro (Los Angeles) harbor.

Asserts 'Bellicosity' Died Because 'Nothing Can Be Done Against Japan.'

By the Associated Press.

Milan, Italy, Dec. 27.—The United States "liquidated" the Panay incident, Premier Mussolini's newspaper asserted today, because "really nothing can be done against Japan."

A biting editorial in the newspaper Popolo d'Italia gave Il Duce's views of the Panay settlement and poked jibes at opponents of the Ludlow proposal to require a national referendum before a declaration of war.

"After the Panay incident," said the article discussing the American gunboat sunk in China by Japanese bombers, "there was a wave of bellicose instincts in the United States which now is calming down in view of and considering that really nothing can be done against Japan.

"They only could send notes to which Japan replied in a correct and solicitous manner which the Government of the United States found satisfactory enough to liquidate the episode."

Opposition to the Ludlow proposal, especially from the American Government and newspapers, "gives documentation that democracy has faults and that its principles are applicable only in the ordinary contingencies of life and not in the extraordinary. . . . When the supreme interests of a people are at stake even the most democratic governments take care not to trust the people's judgment."

New Regulations Alarm Foreigners

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Dec. 28.—Japanese armies rolled southward across Shantung Province today after capturing Tsinan, its capital, and isolating Tsingtao, its great industrial and port city.

The falling of Tsingtao, cut off from the rest of the province, seemed imminent. The some 300 American civilians remaining in the city were ready to take refuge on three United States warships in the harbor.

A dispatch from Tsingtao said the United States gunboat Sacramento would leave today for Shanghai with American refugees.

The Japanese announced Tsinan, seventh provincial capital to fall before Nippon's armies, was occupied completely Monday, four days after the crossing of the Yellow River, five miles north of Tsinan.

Throughout Sunday night heavy Japanese guns pounded the city. At midnight the north and east gates were captured and at dawn three columns of infantry began mopping up the feeble resistance.

Japanese capture of Weihsien, important midway junction of the railroad from Tsinan to Tsingtao, and bombardment of other points on the line indicated Tsingtao had been isolated without a costly major defensive. Chinese blew up the bridges on the railroad, further cutting off the city.

The capture of Tsinan followed the army's announcement at Tientsin that "drastic punitive action" would be taken for Chinese destruction of some $100,000,000 worth of Japanese property at Tsingtao.

New Laws Alarm Nations.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Dec. 28.—Foreign circles studied with growing alarm new Japanese military regulations which virtually clamp martial law over conquered areas of China and provide drastic penalties—including death—for any Chinese or foreigners who violate the restrictions.

A new incident, tending to create tension between Japanese occupants and foreign forces in Shanghai, occurred Sunday night in the Savoy Bar, when an American marine, First Sergt. Ed Gorman, from Nebraska, disarmed a Japanese municipal policeman.

The Japanese policeman reportedly entered the cabaret, one of Shanghai's best-known night spots, flourishing a revolver and threatening patrons. Gorman stepped up and took away the gun. The Japanese later was taken to the police station.

Tokyo, Dec. 27 (AP).—The newspaper Nichi Nichi reported today that Benjamin Kopf, Ford Motor Co. manager in Japan, had purchased $290,000 worth of "Chinese incident" bonds from the Bank of Japan.

The securities were placed on sale to finance in part Japan's military campaign in China.

The newspaper quoted Kopf as saying the Ford Motor Co. had "made much profit in this country in the last 13 years. We thought we should do something for the country where we received such benefit so we bought bonds."

'Fear' as Weapon Against Liquor Assailed; Virginia Study Urges Facts for Textbooks

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Dec. 27.—Two Virginia medical authorities, in a study of the effect of the use of alcohol, made at the request of the General Assembly, concluded today the solution of the liquor problem lies in education "without bias and prejudice" which is "informative and not merely a doctrine of fear."

The treatise, designed for use in public schools, was prepared by Dr. H. B. Haag, of the Medical College of Virginia, and Dr. J. Waddell, of the University of Virginia.

The authors attribute many of the "deficiencies and inaccuracies" found in previous texts to publishers' and school authorities' demands for brevity. These demands, the writers say, have caused "both the author and the teacher to feel that they have space only for the fearful."

"This gives the pupil little real information—only transient fear," the physicians declared. "He is taught that alcohol, regardless of all consideration of time and frequency of ingestion, of quality and concentration, and of age and state of health, is a poison and as such always produces terrible effects; that the dire consequences of over-indulgence are the sequels of any consumption whatsoever. At some time later in life the pupil observes that all who use alcoholic beverages are not drunkards, and do not misbehave; are not sick, and do not go crazy. The resulting influence on the young is far from wholesome."

Stressing that effects of alcohol vary with individuals and contributing factors, the authors contended the primary personal danger of moderate drinking is no direct or permanent physical impairment, but the tendency it might develop toward excessive indulgence.

Even moderate drinking frequently affects co-ordination and reflexes, particularly in the young, the report said, explaining "in part why it is dangerous to operate a car after one has been drinking even in moderation."

Religion and Science Urged To Co-operate More on Ethics

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, Dec. 27.—A plea for co-operation between science and religion to "domesticate and civilize the wild beast in man" was made tonight by Dr. Edwin G. Conklin, of Princeton University, in his address as retiring president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The ethics of great scientists "is essentially similar to that taught by great religious leaders," he declared, and the Christian churches of the United States "are concerned with the cultivation of ethics."

"Why should not science count religion an ally and not an enemy in developing human ethics to a high degree?" he asked.

Neither human nature nor social relations have kept up with the progress of science, Dr. Conklin added, and "this is not the fault of science, but rather of man and of society."

Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution of Washington, D. C., echoed Dr. Conklin's statements in the principal address today opening the association's symposium on the effect of science on society.

The lives of from 5,000 to 8,000 persons killed annually on the Nation's highways could be saved if persons between 16 and 22 years of age were forbidden to drive automobiles, Dr. Harry M. Johnson, of the Highway Research Board at Washington, D. C., told the association.

Business Slump May Wipe Out Old Party Lines

Liberal and Conservative Split Is Forecast in Next Congress.

By the Associated Press.

Washington's busy prediction makers are saying concern about the business situation is likely to result in a showdown between conservative and liberal elements of Congress, regardless of party affiliations, at the coming session.

To those who followed developments of the special session it was obvious the current economic recession had served to stiffen the attitude of the conservatively disposed and make them more than ready to assert their independence.

At the same time it was equally apparent that supporters of Administration methods were inclined to absolve the Administration of responsibility for the slump, blame business itself, and urge an unabated continuation of Roosevelt policies.

With such questions as taxes, anti-monopoly legislation and, perhaps, the wage-hour bill coming up in the session beginning next week, it seemed inevitable 1938 would produce the sharpest clash yet between liberal and conservative camps.

More and more, division of Congressional membership into these two groups has come to disregard party lines—as witness circulation among conservative Democrats and Republicans, alike, of a joint statement of principles recently.

In fact, if three votes, generally considered tests of strength during the special session, may be taken as criteria, the conservative Democrats, by combining their power with the Republicans, can muster very nearly as many votes as Administration supporters.

The entire membership of the House and one-third of the Senate will be up for re-election next fall. If the President's measures should fail at the coming session, some of Mr. Roosevelt's supporters expect the party to seek defeat of recalcitrant Democrats in the coming party primaries.

If, however, Mr. Roosevelt succeeds in aligning enough votes to enact an appreciable portion of his program, such a political showdown would be postponed until the Presidential and Congressional elections of 1940.

Paralleling the battle between conservatives and liberals for control of Congress is an equally intense struggle between the two groups for control of the Democratic Party and the privilege of naming its 1940 Presidential candidate and writing its 1940 platform.

U. S. Citizens Give Parks $12,250,000

Americans contributed more than $12,250,000 to the country's parks in the depression years from 1931 to 1935, according to a report issued yesterday by the National Park Service and the National Recreation Association. Most of the gifts were in the form of land.

One of the largest single contributions was John D. Rockefeller's gift of 56-acre Fort Tyron Park to New York City. Valued at $5,500,000, the gift includes both land and facilities for development into a park.

According to the report: "Throughout the history of park development in the United States, gifts of land and money have played an important part. A study of donated park and recreation areas conducted by the National Recreation Association several years ago indicated that approximately one-third of the total municipal park acreage had been acquired through gift."

Jackson Oversimplifies in Blaming Business Slump on Monopoly Prices.

By Franklyn Waltman

DURING the course of his radio broadcast Sunday night on "Business Confidence and Government Policy," Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson declared that "bringing up past mistakes isn't a substitute for a method of settling our present labor difficulties," adding that "but today's situation, I am sure, cannot be intelligently appraised except against its background."

WALTMAN.

Though Mr. Jackson made that contention in regard to the labor situation, it is applicable with equal force to the industrial recession which is troubling the country. Indeed, it is an admirable rule for discussion of any pressing problem. Unfortunately, however, Mr. Jackson abandoned his own precept when discussing the background of the industrial recession.

In his address Mr. Jackson saw fit to look only at one segment of the picture. He implied that monopolistic price control was solely—or, at least primarily—responsible for the setback given to American economic progress by the current recession. He ignored many other factors which form the background of the present situation.

Indeed, Mr. Jackson's fault is that he over-simplifies his recital of the causes of the recession. Mr. Jackson accurately found that sharp price rises preceded the recession. He looked around for the devil which caused the price rises and, perhaps, because he is in charge of enforcing the anti-trust laws, quickly jumped to the conclusion that monopolistic big business is that devil.

So, Mr. Jackson tells the country that the trouble is that monopoly tried to "skim all the cream of the recovery for itself" and that "it is the monopolists, and those so near monopoly as to control prices, who by profiteering have simply priced themselves out of the market and priced themselves into a slump."

Mr. Jackson undertakes to brush aside the part which increased wages played in increasing prices by making an unsupported contention that steel prices were increased three times as much as necessary to cover increased labor costs and twice as much as the amount necessary to cover the increased cost of both labor and raw material. Assuming for the moment that this contention is accurate, that does not prove all price increases have been unjustified.

How about the increased prices in the textile industry, which is highly competitive? From September, 1936, to April, 1937, the wholesale prices of textile products increased from 70.9 per cent of the 1926 average to 79.5 per cent—an increase of more than 8 per cent in six months. What monopolistic control brought about the increased prices in bituminous coal?

Indeed, the wholesale price index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics shows that at no time in the recovery period has the figure for all commodities been above 88 per cent of the 1926 average. Nor has the index figure for commodities taken as a whole, other than food or farm products.

In appraising the background of the industrial recession, it is necessary to take into account more than price increases, whatever their cause may have been. An important factor in that background is the disbursement of some $2,000,000,000 during 1936 in payment of the World War Veterans' Bonus.

Important also is the Government spending program during 1936, with payments to labor on a scale unrelated to efficiency or production. This pumping of money into the economic body created artificial purchasing power, with a subsequent increasing demand for the products of industry.

These developments, along with the drought in agricultural districts, produced a price rise and rising prices produced speculation, as they always do. Indeed, rising prices were applauded by the President early in 1936, just as the NRA encouraged many of the practices which Mr. Jackson now condemns.

Meanwhile, the policy of prosperity through scarcity in the agricultural field was taken as a model by labor and during the winter a year ago and last spring labor demanded increased wages and shortened hours on the theory that the less people worked and the more costly production was made, the greater the Nation's prosperity would be.

The speculation in certain commodities was not restricted to America but became worldwide, with rubber, tin and metal prices inflated in the world markets. Meanwhile, the Roosevelt Administration became alarmed over price rises which might have serious consequences and undertook to reverse its policies—but not until after the 1936 election was out of the way.

First came a tightening of the credit structure by an increase in the deposit reserve requirements in the Federal Reserve System, followed by an announcement within six months of a further increase which had the effect of doubling those requirements. Then came the Treasury's gold sterilization policy.

These developments in the monetary field took place at a time when the pre-election bonus payment shot-in-the-arm was wearing off. During this period the Administration also commenced reducing its outlay for relief expenditures and Mr. Roosevelt led the attack in a press conference in March on rising prices.

Certainly, a contributing factor of importance to the recession has been the plight of the railroads. Is that due to monopoly? Perhaps, in a minor degree, but the major cause of the almost prostrate condition of the railroads is a diminution in revenue and a sharp increase in operating costs.

In December, 1936, the Interstate Commerce Commission cut a large slice out of the revenues of the railroads by eliminating freight rate surcharges which had been granted during the depression and which apparently were not causing any harmful effects on business or any protests from industry, which had to pay them.

On top of that the railroads had added to their operating costs more than $600,000,000 annually as a result of increased wages, social security taxes and increased costs of fuel, equipment and material. All this has taken place during the last 12 months—but it is only recently that the Administration has become concerned over the railroad problem. Yet the railroads are a major factor in our economic picture. They cannot be depressed without affecting the entire country.

Moreover, the Administration did not undertake to encourage the electrical utilities to have confidence in the future and carry out needed expansion programs until the recession was upon us—another case of locking the stable door after the horse is gone.

It is a little difficult to be greatly impressed by Mr. Jackson's effort to blame the recession on monopolistic practices in view of these other circumstances. Except for his known sincerity in his hostility to monopolistic practices he would be suspected of seeking to distract attention from the mistakes of the New Deal.

Indeed, one cannot take too seriously New Deal diagnoses of economic conditions when remembering the President's Charleston, S. C., speech in 1935 when he asserted that "we are coming back more soundly than ever before because we planned it that way and don't let anybody tell you differently," and his April, 1936, speech lauding high prices and his more recent October 12 fireside chat when he said that "for most of the country this has been a good year—better in dollars and cents than for many years—far better in the soundness of its prosperity."

Seal Ruling on G. H. A. Expected Any Time

The HOLC yesterday submitted a supplementary brief to the corporation counsel's office upholding legality of the Group Health Association, Inc.

At the same time, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal announced his opinion on status of the health clinic would be ready before first of the year.

A previous brief had been submitted by the HOLC to Seal but he was not satisfied with it and requested the supplement.

The District Medical Society also has submitted a brief and now Seal will decide whether the GHA is an insurance company or a corporation practicing medicine.

Maverick Asks Closer Cabinet, Congress Ties

Representative Also Urges New Foreign Policy to Political Scientists.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Dec. 27.—U. S. Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, proposed before the American Political Science Association today that Cabinet members be required to explain and interpret their policies on the floor of Congress.

"Under the present system Cabinet members conceive their policies by themselves," he said. "They are too private. Congress hears about them indirectly and doesn't understand what they mean."

Turning to foreign affairs, he proposed a "new unwritten Monroe Doctrine of 1937" under which governments of the Western Hemisphere would pledge themselves to nonaggression, unfortified borders and a united front in defense of any threatened exterior aggression.

U. S. Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), Florida, accused "big business" of staging a "sit-down strike" when the Roosevelt Administration sought its co-operation in a recovery program.

"Instead of trying to co-operate," Pepper declared, "big business thrust its controlled prices to a height which shocked the public conscience and demanded profits which stagnated the indignant purchasing power of the country."

A continued policy of isolation during the next few years may lead the United States into "the most dangerous type of entanglements with a European super-power alliance," Livingston Hartley, of Washington, formerly of the State Department, told delegates.

"Our ability to refrain from entanglement has been due not so much to our power and the width of the Atlantic, but to the balance of political forces in Europe and Asia," Hartley said.

"We are now witnessing trans-Pacific developments which threaten to destroy this balance of power—and doing nothing about them."

Dr. Charles A. Beard, American historian, declared that the most significant outcome of the recent Supreme Court controversy was the "general admission that the court had rendered dubious and unwarranted opinions and had definitely laid itself open to criticism."

Thomas Reed Powell, president of the association, declared the Supreme Court majorities have "woefully failed" to give to Congress and State legislatures the benefit of "all national doubts" on issues of constitutionality.

Laughlin, Lawyer, Wins Lifting of Suspension

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday ordered lifted the suspension from the practice of law of James J. Laughlin, local attorney, who was ordered suspended by the District Court last November, pending disposition of accusations against him.

In making the ruling the appellate court held Laughlin, who had been suspended without a hearing, was entitled not only to notice of a hearing but an opportunity for a full explanation.

Condemnation without a hearing is "contrary to one of the cardinal principles of the administration of justice," the court said.

Score by Jan Sibelius Vanishes on Sea Trip

Boston, Dec. 27 (AP).—The original and possibly the only manuscript of an early choral-symphonic score by the Finnish composer, Jan Sibelius, has disappeared while en route from Europe to Boston, a Boston Symphony Orchestra official disclosed today.

The unpublished work, "Origin of Fire," written in 1902 and received with success in Europe, was to have received its first performance in America on Friday by the orchestra and the Helsinki (Helsingfors) University Chorus.

Radio Board Receives Mae West Skit Details

By the Associated Press.

Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Communications Commission, announced yesterday he had received complete data from the National Broadcasting Co. on the Mae West broadcast earlier this month.

The commission, McNinch said, has received more than 100 complaints against the "Adam and Eve" feature, in which the actress appeared. N. B. C. officials have banned use of Mae West's name from all programs.

Two Sets of Fake Passports Linked To Robinsons Now

The State Department is working on a newly advanced theory that Mr. and Mrs. "Donald Louis Robinson," who disappeared mysteriously in Russia last month, may be a couple who sailed on the Italian liner Rex with passports issued in the name of Adolph Arnold Rubens and Ruth Marie Rubens, of New York.

This was learned last night after information was received that Italian Line records show a couple giving the Rubenses' names sailed on the Rex October 16 and landed in Naples October 23. The Rex is the ship which was understood to have carried the "Robinsons" to Europe but there is no listing of that name on the vessel for that sailing.

Furthermore, the department has reason to believe Adolph Arnold Rubens never left the United States. From these facts, officials have been led to believe the "Robinsons" may have used two sets of fraudulent passports.

TVA Unions Get 40-Hour Week, $500,000 Boost

8,000 Workers on Hourly Basis Affected by Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 27.—The Tennessee Valley Authority announced today a new wage and hour schedule for 8,000 skilled and unskilled workers providing a maximum 40-hour week with time and a half for overtime and an approximate increase of 5 per cent in wages.

The announcement, ending six weeks of conferences and negotiations between the TVA and the Tennessee Valley Trades and Labor Council, will mean an increase in wages of more than $500,000 a year, the authority said.

Negotiations concerning employes paid on an annual basis have not been completed.

A six-member committee represented the Trades and Labor Council in the conference. The council is composed of representatives of 13 co-operating unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, with locals on TVA projects throughout the valley area.

The new schedule will become effective January 1 and will continue in force a year.

Preparatory to the conference, TVA and union representatives made surveys of prevailing wages throughout the valley.

In negotiations concerning annual pay rates, the Trades and Labor Council represents craft employes of the mechanical department of the fertilizer works and of the electrical department of operations.

Employes of the operating department of the fertilizer works are represented by the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Dr. Myers Is Given Liquor Case Parole

Dr. Walter D. Myers, socially prominent Winchester, Va., dentist and sportsman, who was convicted in a Federal liquor conspiracy case last March, has been issued a parole from the Federal prison camp at Camp Lee, Va., the Department of Justice announced yesterday.

The department said the parole was to have been effective December 23 and it was presumed he was released on that date, though no formal notice has been received.

Dr. Myers was convicted of being a member of a conspiracy to violate the internal revenue laws by making and moving untaxed liquor and was given a year's sentence by Judge John Paul of the United States District Court at Harrisonburg, Va.

He denied connection with the alleged conspiracy or knowledge of a still the Government charged was operated on his farm 10 miles from Winchester. Five men, all of them employed on the Myers farm during the alleged conspiracy, pleaded guilty at the opening of the trial.

Forest Renewal To Help Rural Needy Is Urged

Silcox Report Advocates Replacing Relief With Public Program.

Asserting "publicly financed forest rebuilding can replace a publicly financed dole," F. A. Silcox, chief of the Forest Service, urged a program of forest rebuilding to furnish part-time work to residents of distressed rural areas.

His suggestions were contained in his annual report to the Secretary of Agriculture on operations of the service in the last fiscal year.

"Exploitation is still the rule on private forest lands generally," Silcox said, "and our rural distressed regions—in which forests have been mined—already include 1,300 counties. They embrace half of all our farms and three-fifths of all farm tenants . . . living standards are low, educational facilities meager, undernourishment not uncommon.

"To better conditions in these distressed regions, 60-odd per cent of which are forest and wild lands, residents need part-time work. Even though the forest lands have already been exploited, most of them can be rebuilt.

"Conditions and opportunities for early returns vary from locality to locality, but rebuilt forests will ultimately produce continuous forest crops—and more nearly normal standards of living."

Emphasizing that a "major aim of forest conservation is to help conserve human resources," Silcox described forest communities recently established in the Piedmont plateau and in the lake States region.

In the former, farm land has been purchased with funds of the late Resettlement Administration, and 64 "modest but modern home units" built. The aim is to give settlers part-time work on a nearby national forest, timber from which has been advertised for sale on condition the successful bidder "harvest it so the operation will continue year after year."

Silcox said, however, such projects will not solve the larger problems of forest conservation, adding "some measure of public regulation of forest lands will be necessary to stop human exploitation and distressed regions."

Veteran Police Officer Faces Drunk Charges

Poquette Arrested Christmas Day When He Condemned Squad Car.

A veteran of 15 years service in the Metropolitan Police Department, Pvt. R. J. Poquette of the Eleventh Precinct, must face a charge of intoxication in Police Court this morning, based on his arrest early Christmas morning in the Eleventh Precinct station house by the precinct commander, Lieut. William J. Cunningham.

The arrest, which carried with it automatic suspension from the department, was made, it was learned yesterday after Poquette entered the precinct house and complained to Lieut. Cunningham concerning the condition of the scout car in which he had gone on patrol duty at 11:30 p. m. Christmas Eve.

After his arrest, and when he had been stripped of his shield and pistol, Poquette posted $10 collateral for his appearance today in Police Court.

Meanwhile, a board of police officers composed of Inspectors Benjamin Lamb, L. I. H. Edwards and Capt. Hugh Groves is investigating the conduct of Pvt. Theodore Parks, also of the Eleventh Precinct, and Poquette's partner in the scout car on Christmas morning. No charges have been preferred against Parks.

While the formal police report of the affair has not yet been made, it was learned that about 4 a. m. Christmas Day, Poquette and Parks drove up in the scout car to the Eleventh Precinct house at Shannon place and Eleventh street northeast. Parks remained in the car, but Poquette entered the house.

Lieut. Cunningham investigated the record book in which policemen sign for the receipt of a scout car at the beginning of their patrol. Poquette had signed for the car at 11:30 p. m. Christmas Eve, and there was no notation in the records that he had complained of the condition of the tires or any other part of the car. Lieut. Cunningham then arrested Poquette on a charge of intoxication.

Roosevelt to Ask 35% CCC Slash

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

President Roosevelt, putting renewed pressure behind his governmental economy and budget-balancing program, had asked Congress to slash $123,688,000 from the $350,000,000 Civilian Conservation Corps appropriation for the 1939 fiscal year, a cut of 35 per cent, it was learned last night.

If Congress grants the request, which comes in the face of a "pork barrel" revolt in the House Appropriations Committee, CCC personnel would be reduced from 300,000, including Indians and territorials, to 250,000 and the present 1,604 camps would be trimmed to 1,200, a reduction of 404.

High CCC officials have told members of Congress privately, it was learned, that the number of CCC camps will be reduced but camps to be eliminated have not been decided upon because the economy campaign is still in the formative stage. They disclosed 104 camps will "go under the hammer" early next month and the remainder before end of the present fiscal year next June 30.

The committee will present nominees to fill vacancies on the board of directors at the annual meeting Thursday evening, January 13, at the Jewish Community Center. All members of the Jewish faith who have contributed $10 or more to the Community Chest are entitled to vote.

Reports of activities will be made by Himmelfarb and by the director of the agency, Morris H. Klass.

4 Senators Visit Puerto Rico Head

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Dec. 27 (AP).—Four United States Senators called on Gov. Blanton Winship today, shortly after arriving here to study the need for increasing the Puerto Rican Supreme Court from five to seven members.

Garcia Mendez, speaker of the house and advocate of statehood for Puerto Rico, said the senators would be urged to hear arguments for and against the proposed change in the political status of the island.

Ghost Is Blamed By 'Spirit' Slayer

The baby, Earl Albert, born November 14, died from blows on the head.

Dead for six years, Nead's father "appeared spiritually" and drove him to commit the slaying, the youth said in his confession. Nead married Luella Shaw last June knowing he was not the father of her unborn child, Sheriff Henry J. Becker said both admitted.

Greetings Here Break Records For Christmas

250,000 Wires Sent; Parcels and Letters Handled Show Gains.

As the last "Merry Christmas" echoes died out yesterday, check-ups showed that all existing volume records had been smashed at the city postoffice and that Washingtonians had used cable, wireless and telephone to spread greetings throughout the world.

Local residents sent more than a quarter-million messages from Washington Western Union offices on the 24th and 25th, B. R. Allen, superintendent, said yesterday. Those messages, which went everywhere from Peoria and Oshkosh to Papeete and Zlin, increased traffic "from 15 to 20 per cent" over last year, he declared.

The cause of peace and good will in China and Spain was perhaps boosted by Christmas cables from Washington to Shanghai, to Hankow, to Peiping and Tsingtao and to Madrid. One of the radio companies accepted messages to war-plagued countries "at sender's risk," but that didn't seem to deter friends and relatives at home.

Largest volume of overseas traffic on December 24 and 25 was to Great Britain, Germany, France and the Scandinavian countries, in that order, Western Union stated. Despite—or maybe because of—troubled conditions in other nations, there were "more foreign greetings than last year," according to Mackay Radio.

It was "guessed" that most popular of the "canned" messages was one of the simplest, "Best wishes for a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year."

Although figures for wireless telephone calls were not available, an official of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. asserted yesterday that 13,500 long-distance calls were made from Washington on Christmas, and 9,850 the preceding day. Both totals showed an increase over last year.

When he announced that Christmas mailing had been heavier than ever before, Postmaster Vincent G. Burke also declared that postal employes—both temporary workers and members of the regular staff—set a new record for efficiency in handling the great volume of work.

From December 1 to 24, said Burke, the number of letters and cards which passed through his office totaled 25,226,203. This was compared to 23,838,714 similar pieces of mail handled last year.

During the same period, 787,623 parcels passed over postoffice counters as against 711,043 last Christmas. The total volume of mail handled, Burke said, represented a 7 per cent increase.

During the peak of the rush, 2,600 extra workers were employed. There was no waiting, Burke announced, and the average individual waiting time was one and one-half minutes.

No Common Dividend, Says Republic Steel

Cleveland, Dec. 27 (AP).—Republic Steel Corporation, in a letter to stockholders today, said "all the adverse factors which have confronted the company in 1937 have frustrated our earlier hopes that a common stock dividend would be possible." The company has paid no common stock dividends since the first year of its organization in 1930. The directors on December 6 declared dividends on prior preferred stock.

"It is becoming increasingly clear," the letter said, "that a sound and stable national policy is now imperative if confidence is to be restored."

Detective Trails Auto Thief, Finds His Lair in Flames

Detective Fred Rawlinson sped to Georgetown yesterday after he got a "hot" clew, but the clew literally was too hot.

Rawlinson has been searching for several months for a man who broke into scores of automobiles in the downtown area. Yesterday the detective said he received information that the man sought was living in a shack under the Key Bridge.

With two other policemen, Rawlinson hurried to the place, only to find the shack burning to the ground and the suspect gone. All evidence against the man—the stolen goods—was destroyed in the blaze, the detective stated.

Captain Nixon And Wife No. 3 Expect 3d Baby

Army Officer Ordered to Pay Wife No. 2 $150 for Legal Costs.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Gettysburg, Pa., Dec. 27.—Capt. Thomas Hay Nixon and wife No. 3, the former Anne Cooke, of Chevy Chase, Md., are expecting a third child, according to papers filed in court here today by the Army officer's attorneys.

The couple, married August 30, 1935, already have twins.

The papers filed today were in connection with an order by the court compelling Capt. Nixon to pay wife No. 2, the former Annette Finnerton, $150 for her expenses in a divorce fight with Nixon.

D. C. Decree Is Cited.

Nixon's attorneys, describing his financial status, listed among his obligations "anticipation of cost of medical care in connection with the birth of another child expected in the near future."

They also informed the court that, under an order from the District Court in Washington, D. C., Capt. Nixon is paying wife No. 2 $150 a month. They listed his income as $325 a month with subsistence up to $100 monthly when living outside an Army post. They further informed the court that he receives no royalties or other outside income.

Capt. Nixon, a native of Gettysburg, who is credited with inventing a speedy Army tank, obtained a divorce here from wife No. 2, a former actress, a few weeks before he married Miss Cooke.

Wife No. 2, contending that she knew nothing of the divorce until she read about the marriage, filed suit to have it voided. She argued that Nixon was not a resident of Gettysburg for the required period before the divorce was filed.

Divorce Set Aside.

Judge W. C. Sheely, of Adams County Court, ordered the divorce set aside. Capt. Nixon appealed to the State Superior Court. That tribunal upheld the lower court. Then Nixon went to the State Supreme Court, which last Friday quashed his appeal, saying it had been filed too late.

It was in connection with this last maneuver that Mrs. Nixon No. 2 asked for $150 legal expenses. Judge Sheely today ordered Nixon to pay her the money.

Nixon's attorneys said they were undecided about their next move.

Wife No. 3 broke into the limelight in January, 1935, when she helped her younger sister, Jane, to elope with the family chauffeur, George Scarlett. That romance went on the rocks immediately after the honeymoon.

Barry Bingham Willed Control Of Two Papers

Envoy's Son Gets Bulk of Estate; Is Trustee for Brother, Sister.

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 27.—The will of Robert W. Bingham, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, filed for probate in Jefferson County Court here today, vests control of the Bingham newspapers, the Courier-Journal and Louisville Times, in a son, Barry Bingham, who was co-publisher of the papers.

Directions for disposal of an estate valued by County Judge Ben F. Ewing for probate purposes at $4,625,000 were contained in the will, dated last September 30.

Securities accounted for $4,500,000 of the valuation, the remainder being real estate and personal property.

Trusts composed of 3,000 shares of prior preferred cumulative $100 par value stock of the Louisville Times Company were ordered established for each of Bingham's other children, Henrietta and Robert, with Barry Bingham, who is 31 years old, as trustee. The company owns both papers and Radio Station WHAS.

The will contained an expression of Bingham's wishes in regard to his newspaper properties.

"I have always regarded the newspapers owned by me . . . as a public trust and have endeavored to so conduct these papers as to render the greatest public service possible rather than as commercial ventures," it said.

"My son, Barry, has been associated with me in the publication of these papers and is in thorough accord with my ideals and purposes in connection therewith, and for this reason I am desirous of his being able to continue the publication of these papers after my death."

Police Court Bailiff's Overcoat, Gloves Taken

Wayne L. Christoffersen, who spends most of his days escorting criminals before Police Court judges, was anxious to find a particular thief last night with whom to follow the usual procedure.

Employed as a bailiff at Police Court, Christoffersen reported his overcoat was stolen from his locker. The coat, valued at $15, contained his automobile keys and gloves, he said.

Money-Coaxer Of '100 Faces' Gets Two Years

Posed as 'Franklin Roosevelt 3d,' Others, Including D. C. Army Man.

New York, Dec. 27.—The 29-year run of "the great impersonation" as portrayed by dapper Frederick Emerson Peters, 51, reached a hiatus in Federal court today.

The trim-figured, smartly groomed Peters, who has impersonated at least 132 well-known public characters since 1908—including the late President Theodore Roosevelt, Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Theodore Roosevelt, jr.—took his curtain bow for a two-year sojourn in prison resulting from his latest series of "cash and carry" takeoffs.

Other aliases attributed to him by Assistant United States Attorney John J. Dowling included "Franklin Roosevelt 3d," "Gifford Pinchot 2d," "Clement Studebaker 3d," "Dr. Frank A. Kellogg 2d," "Austin H. MacCormick" and "Commander Richard Wainwright."

"He was so successful," Dowling told the court, in expressing surprise at the light sentence, "that he never had to make a second visit to his victims."

In his Bedouin role as a "man of a hundred faces," Peters fleeced victims in Philadelphia, New York City, Detroit, Cincinnati, Chicago, Columbus and Dayton; Rochester and Buffalo, N. Y.; St. Louis, Peoria, Ill.; Davenport, Iowa; Providence, R. I.; San Francisco and a score of other cities.

The Federal indictment to which he pleaded guilty charged him with misrepresenting himself as Dr. R. B. Baker, U. S. Army, of Washington, D. C., and obtaining $25 under false pretenses.

Woman, Lonely, Writes Farewell, Kills Self by Gas

After penning a farewell note addressed to "Joe," Miss Elizabeth Six, 35, was found dead from illuminating gas in her apartment at 1343 Fifteenth street northwest yesterday.

She was found unconscious by Mary Alice Willoughby, niece of the landlady, who said she went to tell Miss Six a friend was calling. Efforts of the fire rescue squad to revive the woman were futile.

Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty, homicide squad, said the note showed the woman was despondent.

"I have no friends—no mother, no father. I only have you, Joe. I hope God will forgive me," it said.

Flaherty said a suicide certificate probably will be issued.

Robbery at Hotel Held 'Inside Job'

Belief that robbery of the home of Col. Glenn Smith, chief of the United States Geological Survey, at an uptown hotel, was an "inside job" was expressed by investigators last night.

Detective Sergts. Eugene Lambert and Norman Hodkinson said they have been unable to learn how the thief gained entrance to the seventh-floor apartment. The place was ransacked and $3,000 worth of jewelry taken.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson said Mrs. Smith told him she had a party Thursday night for which a substitute maid had been employed. The maid was questioned yesterday.

Meanwhile, close watch was being kept at all pawn shops and second-hand stores in hope some of the loot might turn up.

U.S.S. Vincennes to Join Fleet on West Coast

Boston, Dec. 27 (AP).—The U. S. S. Vincennes, new cruiser commissioned several months ago, left Boston Navy Yard today to join the fleet on the West Coast.

Five new destroyers, Navy officials said, will leave the Boston yard for the West Coast next week.

First Federal Savings, Loan May Open Feb. 1

Final Court Approval of Fidelity Deal Due on January 24.

Possibility that the First Federal Savings and Loan Association might open for business by February 1 was seen yesterday by officials of the association.

They announced that shareholders representing more than 70 per cent of the available assets of the closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association have agreed to exchange their holdings for shares in the First Federal. Shares in the new firm will be issued against 85 per cent of the holdings in the Fidelity.

Details Ironed Out.

Completion of the transaction awaits final court approval, which officials of the First Federal expect to be granted January 24, the date on which preliminary approval becomes effective unless objections are raised before then.

After court approval is given, the new firm should open for business within a very few days, probably by February 1, officials said. Legal details of the transfer of assets were being ironed out yesterday by Walter Bastian, counsel for the First Federal, and James H. Nolan, Fidelity receiver.

Assets Appraised.

For the Fidelity shareholders who prefer cash instead of shares in the new firm, officials of the First Federal have agreed to make this payment, on the same basis of 85 per cent applying to the exchange of shares.

Appraisal of the assets of the old Fidelity has set their value at about $3,800,000, or 85 per cent of the original book value of deposits. Of this $2,660,000 has been subscribed to shares in the new association.

2 Rail Commissars Replaced in Purge

Moscow, Dec. 27 (AP).—A shake-up in the commissariat of railways, the arrest of various officials as anti-Soviet wreckers and the appointment of two new vice commissars were reported today in the department's newspaper, Gudok.

One of the vice commissars replaced A. P. Yegoroff, head of the political administration, who was accused of failure to help expose enemies of the people.

C. of C. Group Supports U. S. Maritime Plan

Committee Also Urges Law Changes to Insure Private Operation.

A pledge of support for the Maritime Commission's "program for a systematic and non-spectacular rehabilitation of the American Merchant Marine," together with changes in the law to insure the merchant marine's upbuilding under private ownership, was advocated yesterday in a report of a United States Chamber of Commerce committee.

The committee, headed by James A. Farrell, the industrialist, recommended specifically:

"The commission has made it clear that if private capital is to be attracted to the shipping industry, assurance must be given that the Government's attitude on the matter of subsidies will be fair and consistent, irrespective of changes * * * in the National Administration; that American operators on essential trade routes will * * * be placed on a parity with their foreign competitors; and that Government supervision will not interfere with the flexibility of operation necessary to an industry such as shipping."

Stresses Private Operation.

Declaring experience after the World War "argues strongly against Government ownership and * * * operation," the committee said:

"Since the Commission is itself opposed to any spectacular shipbuilding program, and since it already has written assurances that 60 new vessels will be constructed over a five-year period, by the nine companies reasonably assured of continued subsidies under the present act, provided certain amendments are made, it would appear to be a wise policy to continue on the basis of encouraging private construction and private operation, without committing the Commission definitely to any program of Government construction.

"Your Committee also believes that no amendment at this time should be made in the act with respect to the basis upon which ships might be constructed in foreign shipyards. It would appear better to wait until experience under the present act has made available comparative data upon which a definite policy might be established.

Praises Recommendations.

"Among recommendations of the Commission in the direction of meeting the practical needs of a privately-owned and operated merchant marine might be cited those which would liberalize requirements as to recapture of "excess profits"; permit companies to increase their financial reserves; give the Commission power to waive salary limitations when in the public interest; protect contractors against cancellation of subsidies without just cause; liberalize to 25 per cent of the foreign cost the down payment required on new vessel construction; and give the Commission wider discretion in the matter of subsidiaries and foreign-flag affiliations of companies receiving operating-differential subsidies."

Bid Decision Wednesday.

By the Associated Press.

Officials of the Maritime Commission said yesterday they expected to reach a decision Wednesday on the disposition of bids for construction of 12 tankers.

U.S. Laws to Protect Dry States Sought

By the Associated Press.

Revision of Federal laws to protect States which permit sale of beer and wines with an alcoholic content in excess of 4 per cent but prohibit distilled liquors of higher alcoholic volume will be sought in the next session of Congress.

Representative Tarver (Democrat), Georgia, sponsor of the proposed revision, contends the present law gives these States no protection against shipments of intoxicating liquors from other States.

Machado Free Of All Charges Filed by Cubans

General Amnesty Pardons Ex-President, Now Too Ill to Go Home.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 27.—After four strenuous years in exile, Gen. Gerardo Machado, one-time dictator of Cuba, slept securely tonight, freed by his homeland of all charges against him. He is so ill, however, that his friends fear he will never be able to return to his homeland.

In a formal ceremony before United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter, a representative of the consul-general of Cuba and a lawyer for Machado signed an affidavit that the former "Iron Man of Cuba" no longer was sought by his government on any charge.

Commissioner Cotter immediately released Machado from the "temporary commitment" under which a United States deputy marshal had guarded him for a month in a hospital room, pending an extradition hearing.

Gen. Machado was included in a general Christmas week amnesty granted by the Cuban congress and president to all persons charged with political crimes.

Cuban courts had indicted Machado on charges of mass murder and misappropriation of public funds.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Missing Slams—No 2.

Yesterday I pointed out that experts playing in the recent Vanderbilt Tournament revealed, by their poor record of slam-bidding, that artificial conventions in this particular class of bids are indispensable. The hand shown below was as cold a small slam as one could desire, yet in both rooms in the semi-final round of the Vanderbilt Tournament the final contract rested timidly at five diamonds.

North, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

In one room where the line up was as follows: North, Moyse; East, Von Zedtwitz; South, Jarmel; West, Lochridge; the bidding proceeded:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♣ | Pass | 1 ◇ | 1 ♡ |
| 2 ◇ | 2 ♡ | 4 ◇ | Pass |
| 5 ♣ | Pass | 5 ◇ | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

Obviously, Moyse's opening bid was very light. Many experts choose this type of opening bid as an alternative toward later overcalling; in other words, they prefer to make a very light one bid rather than a highly questionable overcall at the two or three level. If North does not open the hand he will never be able to bid freely with safety. Despite the lightness of his bid in honor strength, his distribution warranted a free raise to the diamonds, which he proceeded to give.

Over East's heart raise South then lost the opportunity to investigate slam possibilities with any degree of accuracy. Had he used the conventional four notrump to show two Aces and the King of a bid suit, North, on his distribution alone, would have been justified in jumping to six diamonds, the only real danger being that South might have the heart Ace instead of the spade Ace. In view of the opponents' bidding, however, this contingency would be remote and, with South controlling the first spade lead, the possibility of establishing the club suit for later spade discards would be highly attractive. As it was, when South bid merely five diamonds over five clubs, North was through. In the other room the bidding was equally inept, as follows:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 5 ◇ | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Here, South was helpless; his partner's five diamond bid told him nothing about distribution except that there were a lot of diamonds in the North hand. To have bid six would simply have been a shot in the dark. North's proper action, having passed originally, was to overcall West's heart with three clubs, later to raise the diamonds. Assuming a pass on North's part, the bidding should have proceeded:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | Pass | 1 ◇ | 1 ♡ |
| 3 ♣ | Pass | 3 ◇ | Pass |
| 4 ◇ | Pass | 4 N T | Pass |

100 Cured of Fever By Sulfanilamide

Successful treatment of 100 cases of malaria with a form of sulfanilamide was reported in the Southern Medical Journal yesterday by Dr. Roy A. Hill, of Thomasville, Ga.

Most of the treatments were completed during the past three months among laborers in a Georgia logging camp. The persons receiving treatment were suffering from a specific type of malaria germ, Dr. Hill said. He warned against indiscriminate use of the sulfanilamide treatment.

Ruhland to Ask Beds for Adults At Glenn Dale

Health Head to Request Extras in Children's Tuberculosis Ward.

Permission to utilize vacant beds in the children's building at Glenn Dale Sanatorium for adult tuberculosis patients will be requested of the District Commissioners by Health Officer George C. Ruhland, it was announced yesterday.

"I will not ask the Commissioners, however, until the survey, now in progress by the United States Public Health Service, is completed," Dr. Ruhland said, following a conference with Dr. A. E. Russell, of the U. S. P. H. S., yesterday.

Dr. Russell is making a complete survey on the tuberculosis situation in Washington.

Recently, despite an opinion by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal stating that it was within the health officer's discretion to place adult patients in the children's building, the District Commissioners ruled that "the children's building was for children only, except under emergency conditions."

Although an "emergency condition" is not existent at the present time, Dr. Ruhland would like to have the beds in the children's building available to the adult patients when the latter building is overcrowded.

Kellogg Called Statesman Who Dared to Dream

Bishop Gives Eulogy as Body Is Placed in Cathedral.

casket, were floral wreaths from the Diplomatic Corps, the Pan American Union and the Cuban government.

At conclusion of the service in the choir the remains of the former Secretary of State were moved from the aisle, to be taken below to the chapel for interment in presence of the family and a few friends.

Dignitaries representing the President, Cabinet, judiciary and a dozen foreign nations stood silent below the vaulted cathedral ceiling as the lighted candles on the altar were extinguished, signifying the end of a notable career.

Mr. Kellogg, it was recalled yesterday, worshiped frequently in the Cathedral in his residence in Washington and was a member of the Master Builders of that church, an organization devoted to completion of the unfinished edifice.

Chief Justice Present.

President Roosevelt was represented personally at the services by Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Other Cabinet members who attended were Secretary of War Harry Woodring, Attorney General Homer Cummings, representing the American Bar Association, and Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper.

Chief Justice Hughes, who preceded Mr. Kellogg as Secretary of State, was present with Mrs. Hughes.

Foreign envoys who gathered to pay tribute to one of the architects of the Kellogg-Briand Pact included Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador; Hirosi Saito, of Japan; Edgar Prochnik, Austrian Minister; Wilhelm Morgenstierne, Norwegian Minister; Michael Mac White, Minister of the Irish Free State, and Jules Henry, Counselor of the French Embassy.

Among others at the service were Alanson B. Houghton, who followed Mr. Kellogg as American Ambassador to Great Britain; Justice and Mrs. Pierce Butler, Senator Henrik Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, who defeated Mr. Kellogg in a race for the Senate in 1922; William D. Mitchell, Attorney General in President Hoover's Cabinet, leading a delegation from Phi Beta Gamma, legal fraternity; Solicitor General Stanley Reed, Charles H. March, of the Federal Trade Commission, and Frank Hogan, representing the District Bar Association.

Widow Heavily Veiled.

In the family group were the widow, wearing a heavy black veil; Mr. Kellogg's sister, Mrs. Jean Austin, Ocala, Fla.; Mrs. Kellogg's sister, Mrs. F. J. Otis, of St. Paul; four nieces with their husbands, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Harris and Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Clark, of St. Paul; Mr. and Mrs. Seabury Stanton, of New Bedford, Mass., and their children; Mr. and Mrs. John H. Bradshaw, Jr., Madison, N. J., and Mr. Kellogg's former law partners, Guy Chase and George Morgan, of St. Paul.

William R. Castle, Undersecretary of State at the time Kellogg held the Cabinet position and a trustee of the Cathedral, made arrangements for the service. Officials from the State Department served as ushers.

Castle and Keith Merrill, of the State Department, met Mrs. Kellogg and other members of the family when they arrived at the Union Station yesterday morning. The body rested in the Cathedral crypt until shortly before the service.

His parents heard his cries for help, but were unable to reach him. Firemen recovered the body. Survivors include a sister, Mildred Stackhouse, Washington.

Samples by Professionals Are Displayed to Show Type of Pictures Wanted; Entries Are Divided Into Two Age Classes.

The amateur photographic contest sponsored by the Washington Housing Association and the Public Library will close at midnight Saturday, the committee in charge announced yesterday. Entries, which must be scenes of local housing conditions, are to be sent to the association's office in the Barr Building.

Prospective contestants in doubt as to the type of picture required still have a chance to see sample photographs displayed at Barney Neighborhood House and several branches of the Public Library. The work of professional photographers, these prints are of both good and bad housing conditions, made indoors as well as outdoors.

Amateurs of high school age and over should enter the advanced class. The first prize winner will receive $10 and three additional prizes of $5 each will be awarded in this group. In the junior class, for contestants of junior high school age or younger, the first prize will be $5. Ten awards of $1 each also will be made in this class.

Finalists in the contest will be put on exhibit January 10. Prize winners will be chosen by popular vote.

Judges in the preliminaries are William Pryor, chief of the photographic section of the WPA information service; Roy Stryker, chief of the historical section of the Farm Security Administration information division; James Ring, administrative assistant to the District Alley Dwelling Authority; Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, executive director of the Washington Housing Association, and Mrs. Helen T. Steinbarger, readers' consultant for the Public Library.

Professional photographs are on display in the ground floor lobby of the Central Public Library; the Georgetown branch, Wisconsin avenue and R streets; Mount Pleasant branch Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest; Northeastern branch, Maryland avenue and Seventh street northeast; Takoma Park branch, Fifth and Cedar streets, and Neighborhood House, 470 N street southwest.

Garner Catches Up On Texas News as Wife Cooks 'Snack'

By the Associated Press.

Vice President Garner caught up on his reading of Texas newspapers yesterday.

With few members of Congress on Capitol Hill, the bushy-browed Texan had several hours practically to himself and his papers, which always include two Texas dailies and several weeklies.

Regardless of the press of business, the Vice President reads closely the paper from his home town, Uvalde, and on such days as this notes closely the editorials and news accounts of the small country weeklies.

Following a custom they particularly enjoy when business permits, the Garners had luncheon in the Vice President's office, Mrs. Garner presiding in a tiny kitchenette in a section of the suite.

U. S. Extends Price On Mexican Silver

A tentative agreement has been concluded between the United States and Mexico under which purchases of Mexican silver in January will be at the same price paid through 1937, it was learned yesterday. This is about 44 cents an ounce, compared with 77.57 cents paid for domestic silver.

The agreement was drawn up by Eduardo Suarez, Mexican finance minister, and U. S. Treasury officials at a series of conferences. It represented the first phase of the 1938 silver program to become known, with only four days remaining before expiration of the domestic silver purchase proclamation and the international London agreement. There was no indication as to what effect the temporary pact would have on the domestic proclamation.

Va. Bureau Swamped With Job Applications

and sponsor of the Bonneville power project, said he was "preparing to gather facts on the TVA." The genial Republican strategist would not say flatly he will demand a Congressional inquiry into TVA finances, policies and personnel, but said:

"The American people have a right to know what has happened to the hundreds of millions of dollars that have been poured into the TVA. Even how much has been spent on the Authority is not known and, as far as I can find out, is unavailable."

Wants Policy Fixed.

McNary emphasized his view that an inquiry could well be a constructive one to settle differences over management of the TVA and noted that the fight between Chairman Morgan, exponent of co-operation with private utilities, and Lilienthal, who stands firm on the "yardstick" policy of forcing private companies into line with the Administration's theories, has been "going on a long, long time without any sign of settlement."

It was noted in this connection that the row last week had flared out even more bitterly than before, when Harcourt Morgan and Lilienthal openly accused Chairman Morgan of "false and malicious" inferences in statements at condemnation hearings on the Berry marble leases.

Mess Boy Wounds Capt. H.H. Michael

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 27 (AP).—Capt. H. H. Michael, commandant of the Naval Training Station at the Norfolk naval operating base, was wounded today by John Obey, colored mess attendant, who turned a gun on himself, sending a bullet through his brain.

Michael said he kept the gun locked in a drawer in his quarters and could not understand how Obey got possession of the key. He said in his opinion Obey must have been temporarily deranged.

told the jury that Garger first was struck by Kimball's automobile. Straba's machine ran over the body of the colored man, Tolson stated.

Straba, Tolson testified, continued on after running over the body and was brought back by a policeman. Straba said he did not realize it was a man's body, but thought it was a tree limb.

In a second inquest, James H. Vance, 24, of Bowie, Md., was absolved of blame in the death of Mrs. Emma Carter, 80, 1120 Vermont avenue northwest, who was struck in front of her home December 16.

The jury's verdict held the death "due to the negligence of the deceased" when it was said the aged woman walked into the path of Vance's car.

Expert Foresees Happiness at Will (Of Your Doctor)

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Doctors eventually will be able to control human emotions, and make you happy or sad at will, Dr. Foster Kennedy predicted today.

But, the eminent neurologist added, that won't be as good as it sounds, because if everybody were happy, life wouldn't be much fun.

A member of the Cornell medical and Bellevue Hospital faculties, he told the Association for research in nervous and mental diseases that doctors had "pretty well determined" the brain center which controls our moods and some day would be able to "pull the switch" on that center.

B. & O. Seeking New RFC Loan Of $8,233,000

Owing Agency $79,842,923, Line Asks Funds to Maintain Wages.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to approve an $8,233,000 Reconstruction Finance Loan to maintain existing pay rolls and maintenance material purchases, together with assisting in the financing of construction of 2,000 cars now being built.

The road already owes directly, and indirctly through Public Works Administration advances, $79,842,923 to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

In Baltimore last night, George M. Shriver, vice president of the B. & O., told The Post that of the total, $6,000,000 will be used to maintain current pay rolls and to continue the purchase of materials for maintenance.

"That will not involve the addition of men to the pay roll, unless there is a rise in business," he said, "but it will go toward maintaining jobs at the present level."

He said the funds would be used for shop workers, track maintenance and other work in the ordinary course of maintaining the road.

Shriver said, however, that the balance of the requested loan was intended for use in meeting equipment trust certificate maturities.

That balance, $2,233,000, will therefore go, he said, toward aiding the construction of "2,000 cars now being built and paid for," although no contracts for additional construction are involved.

The requested loan, which would mature September 1, 1942, under terms of the application, would be made available to the B. & O. as follows: $3,000,000 December 31, $4,483,000 January 1 and the remainder February 28.

Killer of Baby Puts Body by Yule Tree

Greenbrook, N. J., Dec. 27 (AP).—A young mother of a 2-month-old baby was arrested tonight, accused of killing the 5-month-old daughter of her landlord because "their baby was warm and mine was cold."

Police said 24-year-old Mrs. Sophie Arcuri, who had complained of lack of heat in her rooms, slashed the throat of tiny Christina Bordolon with a paring knife this afternoon and laid her body under the Bordolon Christmas tree. The Arcuris and Bordolons live in the same house.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

Just a common cough, a chest cold, or a bronchial irritation of today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. They may be relieved now with Creomulsion, an emulsified Creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medicinal combination designed to aid nature in soothing and healing infected mucous membranes by allaying irritation and inflammation and by aiding in loosening and expelling the germ-laden phlegm.

The Medical Profession has for many years recognized the beneficial effect of Beechwood Creosote in the treatment of coughs, chest colds, and bronchial irritations. A special process was worked out by a chemist, for blending Creosote with other ingredients and now in Creomulsion you get a real dose of genuine Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and can even be taken frequently and continuously by both adults and children.

Creomulsion is one preparation that goes to the very seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. When coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles—due to common colds—hang on, get a bottle of Creomulsion from your druggist, use it as directed and if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained, the druggist is authorized to refund every cent of your money. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief that you want. ## Emergency Legislation.

One of the most difficult tasks ahead of Congress is careful segregation of all statutes passed as emergency measures, with a view to letting them expire as originally intended. On the part of many Congressmen there is strong disinclination to follow this procedure. That tendency should be vigorously resisted.

Under the pressure of emergency Congress is often induced to enact laws recognized as undesirable in principle. Legislators, asked to choose between two evils, will naturally accept that which at the moment seems the lesser. But in some cases the remedy proves worse than the maladjustment it is designed to cure. And in every case the emergency measure ought to be viewed in a very critical light when the crisis which gave it birth has passed.

Sponsors of the Frazier-Lemke act are now finding it difficult to make out a case in favor of permanent status for their farm-mortgage moratorium scheme. When the act was originally passed thousands of farmers who had mortgaged their holdings were in desperate plight. The act does not appear to have been a vital factor, however, in saving bankrupt farmers from foreclosure. And agriculture today has a far more favorable outlook.

It is ironical that this drive for renewal of legislation to aid bankrupt farmers should follow so closely on the passage of the crop adjustment bills designed to guarantee prosperity for the farmers. If the farm bill serves its purpose, there will be no excuse for fresh resort to an emergency device which hinders the normal functioning of the country's mortgage credit machinery.

In addition to large cash benefits, Congress has also made credit available to the farmer for a great variety of purposes. If he is unable to solve his financial problems with the aid of the Farm Credit Administration, he is not likely to be helped, under normal conditions, by reducng foreclosure proceedings to slow motion.

As if to escape from the logic which has compelled the House Judiciary Committee to withhold its approval of the latest Frazier-Lemke bill, Representative Lemke raises the specter of "trouble and plenty of it" if the expiring law is not re-enacted. "There may even be a few people found dangling from bridges," he is quoted as saying. Such irresponsible threats merely emphasize the paucity of convincing arguments in favor of this new bid for farmer votes.

When Congress passed the original Frazier-Lemke bill its judgment was that this experimental measure should not continue in operation after March 3, 1938. Since the results have been disappointing, there seems to be double reason why it should be permitted to expire on that date.

Use And Abuse Of The Ether.

In "Looking Backward," Edward Bellamy accurately forecast the coming of the radio, even down to the nicety of automatic tuning. But, perhaps because he was concocting a Utopia, Mr. Bellamy neglected to mention the baneful uses to which the air waves can be put. Only pleasant music was heard when a button was pushed. Today, with the radio an actuality, much that is neither pleasant nor music can come out of a loudspeaker.

When it is not drowned out by a strident chorus from his own government's stations, foreign propaganda is regular fare for the European radio listener. Mussolini has been especially active in this business, regularly broadcasting inflammatory indictments of the British in a variety of tongues. And at last England has been stung into retaliation. Beginning with the joyous New Year, London will respond to Rome in kind. A series of offsetting programs in Arabic, Spanish and Portuguese has been announced by the British Broadcasting Company.

Radio, then, is now an accepted prod to international jealousies! Partially canceling this unhappy result of scientific progress was a world broadcast doubtless heard by many Washingtonians on Sunday night. Toscanini was directing the first of a series of concerts in Radio City. Some 23,000 persons have applied for admission to the New York studio in which the programs originate. Probably at least as many millions heard and will hear the incomparable music in their homes.

This is the true role for radio. All things pass, only art remains, said the philosopher. It is to be hoped that this applies as truly to the ether as to the earth.

Science For Humanity's Sake.

As the American Association for the Advancement of Science meets in Indianapolis, hope is once more raised for the organization of some agency that can turn the light of known truth upon the current problems of mankind.

Progress toward that objective has been made in several directions. Scholars assembled at the Harvard Tercentenary celebration in the summer of 1936 heartily approved a movement to co-ordinate the world's knowledge and thus translate it into moral force. In turn, that suggestion met with enthusiastic indorsement of the informed public. More recently a distinguished group of British scientists recommended the creation of a democratic world association of science. The meeting at Indianapolis may determine, in large measure, whether that idea is to take firm root and grow into a powerful world force.

It is especially appropriate for leading scientists of the world to turn their thoughts in this direction. For science has made an enormous contribution to the forces that today are threatening to wreck our civilization. Men in laboratories have unloosed powers that mankind is not yet able to control intelligently. New inventions intended to relieve drudgery and toil have been perverted into instruments of destruction. Our greater facilities for the production of goods have, paradoxically, accentuated the problem of economic instability for millions of families.

In these circumstances the scientist and the scholar acquire a moral responsibility for the labor of their heads and hands. It is not enough for the world's leading thinkers to provide the tools of progress. A much bigger task is to teach mankind to use those tools. And since that responsibility has been so grossly neglected in recent years, the current movement toward greater diffusion of light, understanding and consequent good will assumes a place of commanding importance.

There is a growing awareness in the world that the successful search for truth does not assure the advance of civilization. If the findings of science should lead only to economic changes, without any comparable development of social, cultural and spiritual qualities, the ultimate result might be only disillusionment and chaos.

In other words, knowledge is of value only so far as it is utilized for the ultimate benefit of mankind. The goal to be sought is not so much expansion of the volume of abstract truth known to the few, but rather a fuller and more satisfying life for the many. If science is to fulfill its most important mission, therefore, it must give sober attention to the effects of its discoveries and to the general trend of world events, as well as to the pursuit of abstruse learning.

The current movement might be described as an effort to shift from science for science's sake to science for the sake of humanity. Leaders see the very great opportunity of mobilizing the knowledge of the world as a moral force to counteract stupid and vicious political movements. It is hoped that "truth" and "wisdom" carefully gleaned from the experience of the past and research of the present may be made an active instead of a passive force.

Scientists alone can scarcely hope to accomplish that task. It calls for executive leadership as well as the technique of fact-finding. Moreover, there are many thinkers outside the immediate realm of science who might well participate in this effort to make right instead of might—understanding instead of blind force—the governing power of the world.

If the American Association can initiate the move in co-operation with scientific bodies in other countries, it will by that action alone be performing a needed task. Such an organization, once set up, ought to comprehend all fields of learning. Its resources should be as broad as human intelligence. And no country willing to permit independent investigation should be excluded from participation.

Of course, no intelligent person would expect any such group of scholars to come forth with a ready-made solution for the problems of the world. Perhaps its chief task would be gradual enlightenment of mankind as to the nature of its difficulties. But after all the greatest hope for a stable and peaceful society lies in that very process.

Viewed from any angle, it is evident that the sponsors of this idea have one of the greatest opportunities for service to humanity that has confronted any group at any time.

Rumania's Real Election.

As premier of Rumania, George Tatarescu has been distinguished mainly by his capacity to stay in office regardless of diminishing popularity. But this feat is not so much the result of any unusual ability in walking the political tight-rope as of the royal favor which he has enjoyed.

Now it appears that neither the support of King Carol nor the patronage of Magda Lupescu, the monarch's red-headed mistress and the real power behind the throne at Bucharest, are sufficient to keep Tatarescu premier any longer. In unmistakable fashion he has been repudiated by the electorate.

The Christmas-week elections in Rumania were, in fact, almost revolutionary in their nature. Governments in that Balkan kingdom usually are formed before the voters are summoned to the polls. Elections there are as a rule "made" rather than held. This time, however, the usual and expected did not happen.

Forgetting their marked differences, all the elements hostile to Tatarescu combined to prevent a government-rigged election. The Peasant Party disliked the premier because he had been too lenient toward the Fascist elements and too germanophile in certain of his foreign policies. The Iron Guards denounced him for not being sufficiently pro-Nazi. Both of these opposition groups, and others, struck at him in order to hit Mme. Lupescu.

Because of the combination of opposition, Tatarescu's party failed to secure 40 per cent of the vote and the premier, in the best constitutional tradition, has consequently submitted his resignation to King Carol. A new government must, therefore, be formed.

But the fact that the Peasant Party, although making considerable gains, fell short of their goal while the Iron Guards won an unexpectedly large number of places, will together make it very difficult for an effective coalition to be formed. In the ensuing struggle King Carol and Mme. Lupescu will have a new opportunity to fish in the troubled waters of Rumanian politics. In spite of the complete propriety of his retirement, it would be premature to read Tatarescu out.

The Underlying Issue Remains.

In the opinion of Ambassador Hirosi Saito, Americans are in for a happy surprise. When Japan makes known its terms of peace to China, he says in a current magazine article, these terms "will be moderate and will demonstrate that Japan has no aggressive designs."

If that is proved to be the case Americans will, indeed, be surprised and not least by the circumstance that, for once, a spokesman of the Tokyo government had not been pulling the wool over our eyes. But in view of the large number of occasions since 1931 when the honeyed words of Japanese statesmen have been belied by subsequent acts of cynical bad faith on the part of their military authorities, most of us will not give ourselves up to unrestrained rejoicing in advance.

There is reason to feel gratified by the settlement of the Panay incident that has now been reached. But the fact remains that this settlement does not touch any of the basic questions at issue between the United States and Japan. It is encouraging that Japan has now given solemn assurances that there is to be no repetition of the outrageous attacks on American lives and property, governmental and private. But Japan has thus far failed to give any assurances that she will abide by her solemn pledges to respect the territorial and administrative integrity of China, and to keep open the Open Door.

On the contrary, the barrage of Japanese propaganda now being laid down in this country only emphasizes the contention of Tokyo's spokesmen, official and unofficial, that the Nine-Power Treaty is no longer binding on the island empire. It has become obsolete, they say, and need no longer be observed or respected.

This point of view is directly counter to the stand the United States has taken and will continue to take. As sponsor and signatory of the Nine-Power Treaty, as well as co-sponsor and signatory of the Briand-Kellogg pact, which Japan has also treated as a scrap of paper, we have a moral as well as a material reason for upholding the sanctity of those international agreements. And for that reason the United States is not to be seduced by ambassadorial promises from its sharply critical attitude toward Japan's pretensions to overlordship in China, and toward the barbarous methods she has employed to achieve that aim.

How well warranted is this watchful attitude is demonstrated by the actions of the Japanese military authorites at Shanghai. There they have practically imposed martial law and, by implication, suspended the extraterritorial rights enjoyed under treaty provisions by Americans and other foreigners.

In other words, the objective which the bombing of the Panay was probably designed to further—the forced withdrawal of foreigners other than Japanese from China—still remains in the forefront of Japanese policy. Only the method of achieving it is modified, if that. The shelving of the Panay incident does not mean any real lessening of tension in the Far Eastern crisis.

Mere Man Slips Again.

From the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

A commissioner of jurors in Western New York State says women make better jurors than men because they keep abreast of current events better than their husbands. A Nation-wide survey to determine the extent of the condition might be in order.

The reason attributed—that the women keep posted by helping their sons and daughters with their school work—makes the topic all the more intriguing for fireside discussion.

Mere man thus seems relegated to a position of minor importance in another phase of life, suffers the ignominy of having a pin prick another of the few bubbles remaining in his pride, and appears doomed to wage a real battle to gain that place in the sun which he has, in his own mind, never relinquished.

Women's prerogatives, once confined to the right to change their minds, have grown in recent years like grass after a spring shower, and man is only kidding himself if he thinks he hasn't a fight on his hands.

Animals Or Humans?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There have been several letters printed in your paper, such as those of "Fair Play" and of the president of the local Anti-Vivisection Society, in which the practice of using animals for laboratory purposes is sharply attacked. I feel that there is something to be said for the "lords of creation" who are held up as cruel sadists by these people.

The "anti-vivisectionists" give us the impression of untold cruelties being practiced upon defenseless animals all in the "false name of science" and to no useful purpose. They base their objections to the use of animals on the grounds that these animals are defenseless, that vivisection is cruel, and its practice accomplishes no useful purpose. I believe that most people, when acquainted with the facts, will take issue with this position.

The statement that the use of animals is unnecessary is absolutely untrue, unless one would consider the safeguarding of human life as unnecessary. I will cite just a few instances.

Many drugs are at present used by the medical profession, and found indispensable, which have a very high potency in very small amounts. The physician must know the potency of his preparation as accurately as possible before he can administer it to a patient. A wrong dose is far worse than no dose. Both mistakes, or either, may mean the death of the patient. Many such drugs can at present be tested only by the use of animals.

Many discoveries could never have been made without the use, and in many cases the sacrifice, of some animals. Is the Pasteur method for prevention of rabies in humans worth the lives of several dogs? Pasteur did actually kill a number of dogs and other animals before he could discover this method. The general public will judge which was worth more, the humans saved or the dogs which might have lived. Cases like this are proof enough that the use of animals, whether we like it or not, is absolutely necessary.

Another objection raised by the anti-vivisectionists is that unnecessary cruelties are inflicted upon these animals. As a matter of fact, such is not the case. Even if we were to assume that doctors and other experimenters are inhuman, we still can see how much easier it is for them to work on an anesthetized animal rather than on a struggling one. From a purely selfish viewpoint, if for no other, the experiment is inclined to keep suffering at a minimum.

The anti-vivisectionists, if they wish to be logical in their solicitude for animals, should work for abolition of all slaughterhouses, where far more suffering and killing goes on in one day than goes on in laboratories in months, or are they worried only about dogs and cats, as if sheep and cattle and pigs do not also feel pain?

How many of us would want, in our moments of severe illness, to be given a drug about whose potency even the physician knows nothing? How many of us prefer letting our children die of diphtheria or smallpox to allowing them to be vaccinated? How many of us would prefer to feed our children and babies impotent cod-liver oil and have them get rickets to having rats get rickets and be used to test their product? Is one person worth one dog, or ten dogs, or fifty rats, or a hundred frogs, or are the animals more important? Most thinking people will, I think, give uniform answers to these questions.

It is unfortunate that animals may have to suffer, although such suffering is usually far less than that undergone by many humans in our hospitals, but the choice is between the life of a human being or that of an animal. It is very fortunate that medical science is making this choice for us, courageously facing the unpleasant facts, anti-vivisectionists notwithstanding.

Resistance To Aggression.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: America first! Yes. But America only? No. We are part of the great human family. As the old Roman said, nothing human is alien to us.

This principle applies in the Chinese, Spanish and Ethiopian wars. For us to sit in the shade and not care if other people scorch in the fire of war is contemptible on our part. Therefore we ought to intervene.

But how? We ought not to intervene by force of arms, because that would spread the pestilence of war; we should do it in some other way. We should do it by means of economic pressure. Either boycotts laid on by private citizens, which are none of any government's business; or embargoes laid on by the Government. One or both. That way we would avoid the slaughter, impoverishment and moral corruption which come with war.

But we really owe it to God and humanity that we should intervene between criminal aggressor governments and those which are on the defensive by giving facilities to the defendants for buying from us all the supplies they need, even munitions of war. We ought not to pretend there is no difference between the two sides. There is a moral difference.

Moreover, we ought not to pretend we cannot see which is which, that we cannot tell which is attacker and which is victim. We can see perfectly well. It is as plain as day that Japan in China, Italy in Ethiopia, Germany and Italy in Spain, are lawless invaders, with no more ethical claim to consideration than the kidnapers who refuse to be arrested, but prefer to shoot it out with the G-men. Of course, there is a fight, and there are two sides; but do we think we should be neutral?

WILLIAM C. LEE.
Washington, Dec. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The fallacies that so ingeniously surround the various incidents leading up to the present international strain with Japan are little short of appalling. The diplomatic relations between Great Britain, the United States, and the aggressor in China are daily becoming nearer the breaking point and the responsibility of this uneasy situation to a great extent lies solely upon the shoulders of the former two.

It is not the desire of the United States nor of Great Britain to plunge its people recklessly into war, but I do believe with concentrated effort these two powers could put an end to the gruesome monstrosities now being promoted in the Far East.

Japan, which is one of the leading manufacturers of cotton cloth in the world, even surpassing that of Great Britain, depends for that major industry upon the raw cotton shipped from this country and India. The same applies to other textiles manufactured by the Japanese people, for she possesses little or no wool. Other key raw materials of which she is deprived are iron, petroleum, gold, wheat, etc.

It is estimated that through the ingenuity of these people they can produce raw cotton handkerchiefs to sell in this country for 25 to 33 per cent below our own cost of production. This affects not only domestic handkerchiefs, but likewise the spinning and weaving mills that provide the cotton cloth, mills engaged in printing and bleaching the cloth, the ribbon manufacturers supplying ribbon with which the handkerchiefs are tied, and box manufacturers. Due to the low standard of living in Japan it is possible for them to manufacture these articles at a much lower price level than we can hope to meet.

It is within our power to stop this trade, trade which might affect our commercial markets temporarily, but which would save us countless millions in the long run. If we were to pursue this course it is highly probable that every financial house in Japan would come running to call a halt to the slaughter in China and guarantee the territorial integrity of a free people. It is our duty to China, our duty to Japan, to ourselves and to the world to act and act quickly, not by militant force, but by discriminating intelligence through economic sanctions.

BENJAMIN R. STICKNEY, JR.
Washington, Dec. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the leader of an opposition political party sanctions the international policy of the President, the latter may feel sure that he has a mandate from the people to cooperate with other nationals to put an end to the ruthless warfare that is being waged by such persons as Franco in Spain and the vicious military group in Japan.

England, I am glad to believe, is willing to resort to the most drastic means to stop the brutality of these war-mongers and is waiting for the declaration of co-operation from the United States which should not be postponed any longer, if an actual world war is to be averted.

It is with reluctance that I charge the United States with having too long maintained a policy of isolation under the pretense that the judgment of the first President a century and a half ago, was omniscient and eternal. We must credit Washington with enough wisdom and intelligence to know that, as one of our later poets said, "New occasions teach new duties."

The co-operation of nations that desire the end of the vicious massacre of human beings is imperative, unless the world is to return to barbarism.

EDWIN EVANS.
North Beach Park, Md., Dec. 22.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While Japan insulted the American flag and purposely sank our gunboat, we should not start war on Japan, thus increasing murder. But we should boycott Japan until she restores all American-owned property which she molested, on land or water. Then Japan would respect us more.

We should at least boycott until Japan has complied with the present United States demands.

Year's Lynchings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1937. I find, according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 8 persons lynched in 1937. This is the same number, 8, as for 1936; 12 less than the number 20 for 1935, and 7 less than the number 15 for 1934.

All of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were taken from jails and 5 from officers of the law outside of jails. Two of the victims were tortured with a blow torch; then one was shot to death and the other was burned to death.

There were 56 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern States and 51 in Southern States. In 51 of the instances the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 5 other instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 77 persons, 5 white men and 72 Negroes, 2 women and 70 men, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 8 persons lynched, all were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Rape, 1; crime against nature and robbery, 1; murder, 4; wounding officers of the law, 2.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 3; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 2; Tennessee, 1.

The Post Impressionist

Career Service.

ON April 30, 1894, a mere boy stood in a Federal office, still wearing short pants. On request, he raised his hand before a notary public and, listening to the familiar phraseology about upholding the Constitution, answered, solemnly, "I do." This lad, it is told, took his place as hundreds of others today, as a messenger. He became thenceforth an employe, for good or ill, in the service of Uncle Sam.

Informant continued in recital that in this first agency of government, the employe tarried for 12 years, progressing by non-competitive civil service examination to a clerkship, and advancing in pay from $1.50 per day to $3 per day. The employe subsequently transferred to another Federal agency, remaining four years, and rising in compensation during this period from $1,000 to $1,600 per annum.

Obeying the mandate of "go West, young man," our public servant next moved into a position as forest clerk at a town in Idaho. After a four months' experience on the plains, he gained placement at a forest district main office, Denver, Colo. After one year at this post, continued the narrator, our career-service employe transferred, at an advance in salary, into a disbursing office of a Washington executive department.

* * *

From this station the one-time messenger boy was assigned desk space as an executive aide to an assistant secretary, and later he advanced into the Secretary's office—the goal of few clerks and the hope of many. He continued successively with five Cabinet officers—a service aggregating 16 years. So unique a tenure in a "front office" excited the envy of others, it is related. Plans were laid, secretly and covertly, to dispossess at any opportunity this career-service employe. The procedure, in all its harrowing details, again ran true to common practice in many of these agencies.

In the easing-out process our public servant was first detailed to the White House. This action, once climaxed, forecast the beginning of the end of Federal employment.

Eighteen months of duty at this post of distinction brought about a return to old headquarters, only to find that no position was in waiting—a condition cleverly conceived by the ousters. Five days were granted this faithful public servant to find other department employment. This was acquired in a scientific bureau at a salary reduction of $100 monthly thereafter. Office space, however, was in an abandoned, cell-like room, where work had to be progressed without sight of daylight; in reality, a dungeon.

Surveying the facts, as presented, one might reasonably conclude that years of creditable service merited a reward, not as a penalization, as a finale. "Bureaucrats," to quote the narrator, "do not deal in terms of humanities; they act in equations of office power." In time a new building was erected and more pleasant quarters were provided. All seemed set now for the dawn of a new day; many years of occupation amid cheerful working conditions.

On Februray 13, 1935, came the denouement. Notice was received as suddenly as it was dramatic transferring the "editor-in-the-making" to a clerkship at headquarters in a Southwestern city. Looked at squarely, the move was tantamount to exile. Washington was the home of the civil service employe.

Remarkable in this proceeding was the sheer divested right that transferee was allowed no hearing or permitted an appeal. Regulations in the interest of square civil service procedure were, by administrative officers, totally disregarded. In time position in Southwest automatically expired. The road to retirement became a prospect. Instead, on notification, powers-that-be ruled humanely that employment in the stockpens of a Northwestern slaughtering center would be a fitting climax to a "career service" in Government, although person concerned had, in the past, risen from messenger boy to high office. Duty at the stock-killing center continued 30 days. Then machinery was set in motion to acquire retirement.

Forty-two years as a public servant, in low and high positions, should earn, as a reward, automatic retirement. Was this granted freely? Oh, no; according to detailer of facts, each step to this end had to be challenged, with the aid of legal talent. After seven weeks of maneuvering, retirement became a hard-fought acquisition.

"Career service in the light of such inhumane bureaucratic conduct seems a fantastic proposal," commented our spokesman. "Not until the autocrats in service," he continued, "are trained to look at others as human beings will this fine ideal be worthy of projecting seriously."

"What you have said," replied the listener, "convinces me that the 50-year-old civil service law has, without question, its instances of administrative breakdowns."

Spotlight On Lindberghs

It is a pity that such a furor has to be kicked up over Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh coming back to the United States to attend to their own business. If they used an assumed name it was notice that they were not seeking publicity. The Lindberghs are, of course, news, and if they expect to be utterly ignored they expect too much. Their current trip is, however, not "secret" in the usual sense, but merely unostentatious. It is to be regretted that our public standards of taste and demand have not permitted this visit to be recorded without hysteria, so as to let the Lindberghs know that they may come and go at will with a minimum of the attention they evidently do not want.

And In Connecticut.

AT THIS TIME, when the TVA is engaged in a dastardly attempt to steal Senator George Berry's marbles, swamped beneath the waters of Norris Lake in the beautiful Southern mountains, it is heartening to learn that better and more generous morals prevail in another unit of the American Government.

PEGLER.

In Fairfield, Conn., the citizen whose holdings lie in the way of a great public improvement may count himself extremely fortunate. For the State of Connecticut has been acquiring land for a new highway leading into New York City at prices which have given rise to the suggestion that the property is being bought by the pound or the grain. The State is paying an average price of $7,000 an acre for land which the thrifty and hardy Connecticut apple-knockers cleared of forest and rock with the ax and the ox many generations ago and which their weary descendants finally abandoned within the last 50 years as mean and tired soil, too stingy to pay out a man's labor in farming it.

• • • •

HAVING NO State income tax, Connecticut offered, in addition to a leafy retreat from the hard life of the city, the attraction of a refuge for the tax-weary New Yorker with a private income from investments and this quality added something to the value of the land. Greenwich, Conn., the first station over the line from New York, became a veritable colony of runaway slaves and the trains out in the evening buzz and babble with indignant criticism of Mr. Roosevelt and the Russians who surround him.

Greenwich and New Canaan, a few miles farther out, contain many Wall street Republicans and it was in this region that Mr. Fred Tisdale, a Democrat out of Union City, Tenn., enjoyed such good hunting during the last campaign, enticing Wall street Republicans into political disputes and needling them until they lost their native caution and offered him bets on Landon at even money, at which point he pressed the trigger and—wham!

Considering the quaintness, the tax immunity and all, land prices on the Connecticut side of the State line rose to $1,000 an acre in some places but diminished, of course, as the train drew farther from the city. There was some swamp land, also, which was just too quaint for any use, even for a weary refugee, but when it came time to do business with the State of Connecticut one plot of 25 acres, much of it planted to cat-tails and garter-snakes and assessed at $13,000 sold for $183,000.

ANOTHER PLOT belonging to a Republican statesman distinguished for his high principles, and other members of his family, stood in the path of progress, with an assessed valuation of about $14,000 but the State Government did not rob him. He and his dear ones received $100,000 for less than half and still retain the rest. He has said that the remaining portion, being now difficult of access, is worth very little but there has been no public offer as yet to donate the remainder to the public. In fact, its worthlessness might later be found to amount to a very substantial price.

Meanwhile, workmen who were otherwise unemployed have received the great boon of employment on the building of the highway and altogether the project has been a beautiful thing. The workmen got wages and were thus kept off relief and saved their self-respect and many citizens of the upper classes who were lucky enough to be in the path of inexorable progress have seen a rekindling of the sense of responsibility in Government. They have received prices beyond the dreams of the most reckless land speculators. They, too, are far removed from the relief rolls and their self-respect seems unimpaired.

Nautical Ballad For An Unsettled Era

(Written with the usual apologies after reading reports, now under Congressional inquiry, of labor troubles and other strange happenings at sea.)

A capital ship for an ocean trip
Was the Walloping Window-blind;
No loyalty nor law at sea
E'er troubled one sailor's mind;
The crew to a man had a permanent plan
For its hours of work and play,
And each cruise, so they state, was involved in debate
As each sailorman had his say.

II.

For a steward to do a thing for you
Was quite out of the question, for
He had speeches to make for the union's sake
And they couldn't be made ashore.
All the cooks proclaimed they were greatly shamed
By the wages a sea cook got;
Food at any price was as cold as ice—
But the speeches were piping hot!

III.

The wireless men staged a riot when
They heard that their scale was low,
And no S O S would they send unless
They were guaranteed much more "dough."
The boatswain's mate made the skipper wait
For anything asked of him,
And the purser, too, helped dissension brew
As he spoke on a labor whim.

IV.

The freight-crew boys shouted ship ahoys
As they cheered for the C. I. O.
Coins they'd gaily toss to show which was boss
In the teeth of the hardest blow.
And the engineers gave resounding cheers
And with words quite bold tossed traditions old
Through the port to the laughing sharks.

V.

The starboard watch yelled "Another Scotch!"
As he sat in a tourist's lap,
And proclaimed the rules of the sea "for fools"—
And a capitalistic trap;
Men in stewards' suits cried "Hello there, toots!"
To the tourists of gentler sex,
And they said "Says you!" to a fellow who

VI.

The captain tried to maintain his pride
As he labored both long and hard,
But his stern commands didn't move the hands
As they yelled "Where's your union card?"
Tourists went stark mad as things grew quite bad
After days of continued fuss,
And in picket lines bore their own big signs:
"This ship is unfair to US!"

Not Slipping.

We have got around to looking over the new 1938 telephone book and it warms our social consciousness to know that we have made it again.

The 1938 auto plates are being distributed and the fellow who always demands a low number can hardly wait to get the tag which will make him feel that his unimportance is overestimated.

Girl performers in New York night clubs are to be unionized and it will at least be a novelty to hear somebody shouting for the shorter working night.

Silver's Subsidy

By Herbert M. Bratter.

THE TREASURY'S press release of September 15, approved by the President, served notice to all and sundry that the proclamation whereby Mr. Roosevelt in 1933 undertook to buy all this country's mine production of silver is due to expire next New Year's Eve. Originally this proclamation guaranteed American silver producers a handsome subsidy and an unlimited market. The original subsidy was about 64 cents. But, yielding to personally presented arguments of silver-minded Treasury Counsel Oliphant, the President—to Mr. Morgenthau's quite evident surprise—later raised it to over 77 cents. There it stands today.

The real purport of the news release of September 15 to anyone owning shares in an American silver-producing mine is this: "There is no present provision for paying you a special subsidy for your silver after this year. If you want the President to do something to continue a special subsidy for you under one or another of his broad monetary powers, you have little time to lose. Turn on the heat, if you can, even though Congress is not in session. Otherwise in January your income drops from 77 cents to 45 cents per ounce, the present world price maintained from Washington."

Why we should make the silver mine owners of this or any other country rich at our expense is beyond the comprehension of intelligent citizens. The silver program, a species of inflation designed to benefit the few at the expense of the rest of us, may feel painless. It may seem to cost nothing. Senator Pittman, of our least important silver State, will tell you that the Treasury profits from it; yet he has the reputation in the press gallery of knowing the truth concerning the economic cost of the program well enough. Government silver purchases here or abroad are a tax on every one of us. They are a form of inflation and, as such, rob the poor. What the silver-sellers gain comes at the expense of the rest of us, and not out of thin air.

Policy Inaugurated Following World Parley.

THE POLICY of buying American-mined silver was put into effect by President Roosevelt in 1933, following the World Economic Conference. Amid all the grave, economic problems then clamoring for relief, our delegate at London, Senator Pittman, devoted his full efforts to getting a shameful silver agreement.

Rebuffed by the amazed Europeans, Pittman finally came home with a face-saving document which he himself admitted "only about half adopted" his original proposal. Yet in a radio broadcast to this gullible public from across the Atlantic the Senator described his achievement as "the most remarkable multilateral agreement ever entered into between governments, and of itself alone it would have justified this conference. . . Prosperity will be upon us before we can realize it." People actually believed him.

"Remarkable" and unique the document was indeed. The United States undertook for four years to buy up some 24,000,000 ounces of American-mined silver per annum; Mexico, chief silver producer of the world, 7,000,000 ounces; etc., while the government of British India, long a heavy seller, "agreed" not to sell more than it had ever been able to sell, and the government of Spain, never known as a seller of silver, agreed to "limit" its sales to 5,000,000 ounces per annum. China consented not to sell any demonetized silver, the very same China from which we have since bought scores of millions of dollars worth of demonetized metal.

The "agreement" was a farce. Not even all silver producers entered it. It was ratified abroad reluctantly and only after postponement of the ratification date; and then only with important qualifications. Before many months it was violated by various signatory governments including Mexico, China, Peru and notably by ourselves.

U. S. Producers Share Largesse With Foreigners.

WHAT WOULD BE the excuse for now renewing the London agreement? Under the silver purchase act of 1934—that base political compromise which has surely caused gray hairs to grow on the heads of the harassed officials encharged with either executing its terms or apologizing abroad for its effects—under this act, American producers of silver may still share with foreigners some of the largesse lavishly laid before them.

So long as the Treasury chooses to buy silver at the artificial price of 45 cents per ounce (the so-called world price), Americans could get that price. If the President now issues no new proclamation, after this year they will no longer receive 77 cents per ounce, but only 45 cents. Yet that's still too much, since the price stays there only because of what the Treasury is doing.

An excuse suggested for not allowing this "calamity" to fall on the West is that, without a renewed agreement with India, that country may next year dump large quantities of silver on the market. This excuse is not exactly self-evident.

Actually, no one knows what India will do if the London silver agreement is not renewed. The Indian market, after all, has now for several years been accumulating silver again.

Pressure on Washington from our greedy silver advocates played havoc with the currency of silver-standard China, as well as with the coinage of Mexico, Peru, Iran and various other nonsilver-standard countries. Well did China's skilled diplomats pursue the advantage of our embarrassment, once they had decided to abandon the silver standard.

Our silver policy was supposed to increase the purchasing power of the Orient. It did so, but in a quite different manner from that fallaciously expounded in 1930-33. In the end, China has benefited from it tremendously, having been thereby enabled to adopt recommendations of Jenks, Vissering and Kemmerer long contemplated but never previously attainable. Now, all the silver the Chinese can hurriedly turn up is being purchased by us with good American dollars.

West Point Described As Memorial To Racket.

SOME YEARS before the present silver episode the Philadelphia mint undertook to count the idle silver dollars piled up in its vaults as a result of the silver folly of an earlier generation. It then took a sizable crew of men about six months to count the coins in that one mint alone. Yet today we hold a colossal hoard of silver, and a special vault is being built to house the dead metal at West Point, an enduring memorial to the world's most efficient racket. For that silver could today be sold at only a minute fraction of its cost price. No one would take it. Not a single country remains on the silver standard or would for a moment voluntarily adopt it. To whom could we sell the hundreds—yes, hundreds—of millions of dollars "worth" of silver we have purchased since 1933? To no one, of course.

West Point will be a monument to the Senate rule which enabled the representatives of seven States to hold up the country for a selfish subsidy. When they did so, on the ground that it would help an important industry, few of their colleagues were aware that jelly-making was listed by the Commerce Department as more important than silver mining.

If we subsidized silver, a microscopic industry, shouldn't we logically also have subsidized more important industries like glue and mucilage, leather gloves, strawberries, lemons, spaghetti, nuts, linoleum, chewing gum, envelopes, or string? The soap industry, even in silver's good year, 1929, was almost 10 times as important as silver in our national economy.

Not only is the industry small in the country as a whole. It is extremely small even in the West. In 1929, according to the Census Bureau, only 2,838 persons in the United States were engaged in the silver mining industry, in mines whose main product in point of value was silver. If income and other internal taxes are any indication of the economic importance of an industry, note that the entire silver belt of seven States in 1932-33 contributed less than half of 1 per cent of this country's Federal internal revenue. And in that belt agriculture, forestry and grazing are infinitely more important than silver.

While it is vain to close the barn door after the horse is stolen, our horse-thieving silver policy still drains our national income every day of the year. It is desirable that the country re-examine this ridiculous policy now, before the effective silver lobby puts some more heat on the Administration. The President, it is true, leans heavily on Western votes. It would be a temptation to yield again to the silverites. Only public condemnation of a political racket that violates decency can guarantee his taking the course which would relieve the Treasury of its No. 1 nuisance.

After The Panay.

RELATIVES of a man suffering from bullet wounds and bed sores may rejoice when the latter condition is cleared up. But their joy is necessarily tempered by the realization that the more fundamental difficulty remains.

That is the present situation with respect to the Panay incident. The assurances given by Japan that there will be no repetition of such attacks have been accepted as satisfactory by the Government of the United States. But the underlying issue out of which the Panay crisis arose remains as troublesome as ever.

This is made clear by latest developments at Shanghai. There the Japanese army is obviously seeking to achieve in roundabout but unmistakable fashion what they failed to achieve by bombing the American gunboat, namely, force the United States to clear out of China.

• • • •

INSTEAD of clearing out, this Nation stood its ground. Japan was quickly called to account and as quickly made humble apologies and offered indemnification. In due course the necessary guarantees against repetition of the Panay incident were given. But such guarantees, be it noted, at no point included any promises not to infringe on American interests in the Far East. For no such guarantees could be given without a complete Japanese about-face on the China question.

We are back to the status quo ante. The United States, now as heretofore, still rests on its contention that Japan is the aggressor in the present undeclared war. Japan, for her part, is determined to proceed with her aggressions until China bows the knee.

It would be little short of miraculous if under the circumstances incidents did not occur between Japan and the other powers holding a stake in China. The chances are great that they will occur.

• • • •

AT SHANGHAI Monday the Japanese authorities delared what is tantamount to a state of martial law applicable to all—Chinese and foreigners alike. Those committing any one of ten types of offenses against Japan's forces in China will be subjected to drastic penalties up to and including capital punishment.

For the time being, apparently, the Japanese, while making these regulations applicable to all conquered areas, do not plan to apply them to the International Settlement or the French Concession at Shanghai. To that extent the treaty rights of foreigners are to be respected. But since Americans, Englishmen, Frenchmen and the nationals of certain other countries enjoy, under existing treaties, extraterritorial rights everywhere in China, the effect of the new Japanese regulations will be to place under Japanese jurisdiction all foreigners who happen to live in those parts of China conquered by the invaders.

SHOULD foreign powers accept this Japanese action as valid and binding on their nationals, that would involve (1) an admission that Japan's rights as conqueror transcend the treaty rights of those powers at peace with China and (2) a readiness to go along with Japan's claim to overlordship in eastern Asia.

Neither is likely. There is not the slightest possibility that the United States nor any other great power with treaty rights in China will in these particulars bow the knee to Japan. On the contrary there is every reason to believe that they will deny Japan's right to issue regulations binding on foreigners as those issued at Shanghai.

A new incident, less dramatic and less tragic than that of the Panay, but basically of the same variety, is thus in the offing. And there may be others.

• • • •

In the first place the Japanese continue to insist on the accidental nature of the attack on the gunboat despite the great volume of circumstantial evidence provided by eye-witnesses, officers of the Panay and the Navy's board of inquiry.

Secondly, there is the care taken by the Japanese government to absolve the army of any complicity in the affair. It was the navy which took full responsibility for the attack on the gunboat.

And, thirdly, there is the circumstance that the Japanese government was careful to withhold from the people of Japan full details of the incident. Only excerpts from Japan's note to the United States were published, these excerpts not including the pledge of guarantees against repetition.

In other words the army remains all-powerful in Japan, so powerful that it must be shielded from blame no matter what it does, while anti-militarist tendencies in Japan itself are curbed by keeping the people ignorant of actions by the army which tend to embroil the empire in difficulties with other nations.

The Japanese army may take this deference by the civil government at home as a carte blanche to pay no attention to the rights of others. It is a far from happy state of affairs.

Mary Broad's Adventure.

THERE IS NO GREATER Boswell scholar in the world than Prof. Frederick A. Pottle; and he adds to his vast and precise learning the grace of a literary style. As a kind of vacation from his prodigious labors on the Boswell manuscripts he has just published a book called "Boswell and the Girl from Botany Bay" (The Viking Press, New York).

Those who enjoyed Capt. Bligh's adventures during and following the "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Men Against the Sea" will find this little book thrilling. And all those who have ever done any editorial work will enjoy Prof. Pottle's prefatory remarks.

• • • •

IN COMPARING Capt. Bligh's voyage in the open boat and that by Capt. Edwards (Bligh was set adrift two years before Mary Broad, the Girl from Botany Bay), Prof. Pottle, who is not given to superlative, says, "Of the three, it seems to me that Bryant's voyage was the most remarkable, for he had on board a woman and two little children, there was no professional navigator in the party, and of the entire crew only he and one other convict are known to have been familiar with the sea."

• • • •

WILLIAM BRYANT had married Mary Broad in the penal colony in Australia, they had two little children, and with some other convicts, they escaped, and their long sea voyage, followed by the most cruel ill luck (never was there a more terrible example of what is called the irony of fate) was a series of astounding adventures. Her husband died and so did her two children; and she was taken back to England a convict, tried and resentenced to Newgate Prison.

Here is where James Boswell appears; and though he was frequently drunk, he was an angel of mercy to these convicts, secured a pardon for Mary Broad, gave her out of his own depleted purse 50 pounds a year and restored her to her father in southwestern England.

Prof. Pottle closes by saying that he hopes more will be discovered about the later years of this heroine. "I hope that it will prove that she emigrated to America and became the ancestress of some one now reading this book."

Government Worker Speaks Her Piece.

"I'D LIKE to do the talking for thousands of girls in the Government," she said.

And, since she was a very attractive young lady with a nice voice, I couldn't see any reason why she shouldn't.

McCARTHY.

"You've written some pieces of what a movie usher thinks about, or the cop on the corner, or the fellow selling papers," she said. "Why not give us a column telling how we single girls in the Government get along. How about telling what we think about?"

"Lady," I said, "I just write a column. I can't read minds."

"All right," she said, "then you do the listening. Because I think I'm an average Government worker. I think my case is average. And I think that thousands of them feel just as I do. And it's a bad feeling."

She said that she was 27 years old, had had two years of college and then business training. She was born and lived most of her life in Tennessee. And, for her, Washington was a big city.

"I don't know how I got the idea," she said, "but I decided to try to get a job here. I got it all right. I'm here with a civil service rating.

"But the funny thing about all this is how I felt about things before I got my job. And how I feel about them now. I had the idea that Washington was 'big time.' I painted a nice picture of glamorous doings, on the largest salary I'd ever had in my life.

"I sort of pitied the local boys and girls that were going to remain bogged down in the home town. It's a little town of about 15,000 people. I was, I felt, going places. Now that I've been here a year and a half, I know I'm just hanging on. And I don't know why.

• • • •

"FOR ONE thing there's the matter of money. The salary my civil service job pays me was real money back in Tennessee. I thought I'd be in clover. But I hadn't heard anything about the Washington rents, or the cost of food.

"For $25 a month I got a room in a nice respectable rooming house. But back home we'd have called the room a closet. It was that small.

"Then, like a lot of other small-town kids, glorying in their weekly pay checks, I discovered I had something I'd only read about. I had credit. I could go into almost any store in town and walk out with an item it would take me months to pay for. I could do it because I worked for the Government.

"Well, like a lot of the other bright little girls, I discovered after I'd been here about three months that I'd tied my salary up for months to come. I had a lot of nice things I'd never had before and I also had a lot of junk that I had as much use for as the man in the moon would have for Santa Claus' whiskers.

"I still don't see what you're complaining about," I told her, but she told me to hold on.

"Wait'll I give you the picture," she said. "This town was going to be 'big time' for me. That's what a lot of other girls thought, too. We were going to earn big money!

Grandma daily expected a letter telling how we'd met Senator So-and-So. We would meet important people. And the folks back home, with the attitude prevalent in the sticks, had visions of us becoming department heads. Maybe we'd even get our names in the paper, or marry a Congressman.

"The truth of the matter," she said, "is that we really don't amount to a darn thing as individuals here. We march down to work, or squeeze into buses, with the regularity of marching regiments. We go through the motions all day but if we're absent it doesn't make much difference.

"We don't even have the importance of cogs in the machine, because individually, if we're absent, it won't make a great deal of difference. The lack of one hand won't be noticed.

• • • •

"FOR THE PRIVILEGE of doing this, we're paying outrageous prices for food and rent. And we're all tied up with our credit purchases. We have to borrow carfare the day before payday. As a matter of record, I noted down the requests in our office for a loan before payday.

"One-third of the girls had to borrow money for carfare or lunches in the week before payday. And yet we're getting what in other sections of the country would be darn good salaries.

"In short," she said, "we're sort of fed up with this here Washington. Our jobs under civil service may be assured until the millennium. But even that is part of the trouble. We know what we're going through now. And we can see a little too plainly what we've got to look forward to for the next 20 or 30 years."

"You just mean you personally are a little fed up, don't you?" I asked.

"Sure," she said. "But this is exactly the way thousands of us 'lucky' Government girls feel. I'm not just giving my own reaction."

Job Insurance Lift for Trade Forecast Feb. 1

Impact of Payments Will Be Delayed in Effect, Officials Say.

By the Associated Press.

Officials of the Social Security Board say they expect business to receive a lift about February 1 from the payment of unemployment insurance benefits in 21 States and the District of Columbia.

Board officials said yesterday time alone would tell how much of the $437,800,000 reserve of the unemployment insurance systems would be paid out this winter. They said they would have no idea until insured workers who have lost their jobs begin to register after January 1.

An immediate upswing in business probably would reduce the amount considerably, officials added.

"Shock Absorbers"

"Unemployment insurance is not a cure for the problem of unemployment," one said. "Work and a wage are the only cure for being out of a job.

"But unemployment benefits will act as a shock absorber in periods of unemployment, both for insured workers and for business in general.

"They will buy groceries and help pay rent. Money will flow back to local trade and help check loss of sales by stores, loss of orders by factories, more lay-offs, more people without wages, still less business, still more unemployed."

The 22 unemployment insurance systems scheduled to start payments within the next two months vary to some extent, but have many similarities.

Laws Require Wait.

All provide unemployment benefits only for persons who have had jobs since the systems were established.

Most of them cover workers whose employers also employed at least seven others. This lets out the single clerk in a grocery store, for instance. Only in the District of Columbia, Minnesota and Pennsylvania are single employes covered.

All the systems require the insured unemployed to register at employment offices and to wait several weeks before receiving benefits. In that waiting period, the unemployed man, or woman, must take any suitable job that turns up.

New Dealer Takes His Place on SEC

By the Associated Press.

Jerome N. Frank, one-time AAA attorney, took his position yesterday as a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Frank described himself as "neither a conservative nor a radical, but an enthusiastic New Dealer."

"I am a thorough believer in democracy," he said. "The American people are devoted to the profit system and we have got to find a means of making the profit work intelligently under a democracy. That is what the New Deal is trying to do."

Law for Licensing Sleuths Is Weighed

By the Associated Press.

Senator Thomas (Democat), of Utah, said yesterday the Senate Civil Liberties Committee was considering the licensing of private detectives as a means of halting labor espionage.

He added legislation to require such licensing was one of several proposals being studied by the committee, which published last week a list of 2,500 firms it alleged had hired detectives.

Thomas, a member of the committee, said the effect of licensing detectives would be to expose them to workers and thus defeat labor spying.

Tax Group Scales Levies for Small, Middle, Big Firms

By the Associated Press.

Members of the House tax subcommittee said yesterday they had decided to divide corporations into three tax groups, according to the size of their incomes.

These groups were to be established:

1. Corporations with incomes of $25,000 or less would pay a normal income tax, probably of 12½, 14 and 16 per cent, and no undistributed profits tax.

2. Companies with large incomes would pay an undistributed profits tax of 16 to 20 per cent.

3. Firms with medium-sized incomes, ranging up from $25,000, would be placed in what sub-committeeman termed a "notch," with taxes lower than the 16 to 20 per cent undistributed profits tax of the big corporations, but somewhat higher than levies on firms paying only the normal income tax. Intermediate corporations also would be exempt from the undistributed profits tax.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend presents Bidu Sayao, soprano (Paul Ulanovski, accompanist) and Richard Crooks, tenor (Stuart Ross, accompanist), in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom Monday morning. Program: "If Thou Be Near" (Bach), "Ninarella" (Mozart), "Ah, Love, But a Day" (Protheroe), "Have You Seen But a Whyte Lilie Grow" (Traditional), "Old Mother Hubbard in the Style of Handel" (Hutchinson), arias and duets from "Manon" (Massenet), "Le Roi d'Ys" (Lalo), "Lo Schiavo" (Gomes), and "La Traviata" (Verdi).

Continuing this season her sponsorship of musical celebrities, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend presented yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom at her ninety-eighth musical morning two Metropolitan Opera artists: Bidu Sayao and Richard Crooks. To the large and cordial audience welcoming them neither was presumably a stranger, for the former had been heard here on two occasions and the latter is a favorite of long standing. Their appearance in a joint recital afforded an enjoyment which was evident in the more than hospitable applause.

The lyric sprano voice of Miss Sayao has indubitable charm in its clear limpidity and suave flow and her use of it indicates the best of guidance in matters of attack, legato and shading. Admirable were the tenderness of tone and the grace of phrasing in Mozart's "Ninarella" and in Manon's aria, "Je suis toute etourdie," the naivete and joyousness of the character was finely portrayed. It is in the finesse of emotional expression that she excels, for the timbre of her voice does not bear well the stress of declamation.

One was grateful to Miss Sayao for another opportunity to hear the aria, "Come serenemente," from the opera, "Lo Schiavo," by her countryman, Carlos Gomes, who deserves better than to be known almost exclusively as the composer of "Il Guarani." Her reading of this poetically imagined melody conveyed eloquently its graces of line and sentiment. There was affecting wistfulness, too, in her singing of "Addio del passato" from "La Traviata."

An ingratiating artist, Miss Sayao has a captivating command of lyric subtleties. As long as the dynamics are light, she is at ease in nuance. But when she presses the limitations of her voice she incurs the danger of uneven tone and even of shrillness.

Richard Crooks was in excellent voice; his orotund tones rich and resonant and the covered tones clear in quality. His sense of style was fully operative in his treatment of Bach as contrasted with the Gallic suavity of the aria, "Vainement, ma bien aimee," from Lalo's "Le Roi d'Ys." His plastic molding of line was at its best in the lovely old English song, "Have You Seen But a Whyte Lilie Grow." In the duets with Miss Sayao, his restraint and artistic tact brought about a delightful blending of timbres.

Claims Unionists Trying to Keep Industry Out of Jersey City.

By the United Press.

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 27.—Charging that the Committee for Industrial Organization was trying to prevent industrial plants from locating here, Mayor Frank Hague tonight called on the people of Jersey City to "aid me in my efforts to obstruct this lawless element."

There have been frequent clashes between Hague and C. I. O. leaders. A few weeks ago Jersey City police prevented members of the organization from distributing pamphlets inside the city limits.

"If the people of New Jersey stand behind me," Hague said in a formal statement, "I can assure them that before this campaign of violence and terrorism is ended I will bring to justice all those who may be responsible for any unlawful attacks and violence in this city."

The mayor's statement bore the caption "The Real Reasons Behind the C. I. O. Movement in Jersey City."

"While uprisings and unrest were prevalent throughout the country," he said, "Jersey City was free of any disorder or labor trouble. . . . Contributing to this result was the fact that we have always required that industry not only maintain proper working conditions for its employes, but that the highest prevailing scale of wages should be paid to them.

"They (C. I. O. leaders) are opposed to any city which can boast about the absence of unrest and the freedom from labor disorder. Their principal method of operation is to create disorder; to bring about labor disputes and to drive industries out of the city where they cannot gain control. Their battle cry is to crush Hague because he has the courage to prevent them from gaining a foothold in Jersey City."

Society Turns Out in Full Force as Mrs. Townsend Holds Her 98th Musical Morning,. First of Season

Diplomatic, Official and Residential Notables Hear Bidu Sayoa, Brazilian Soprano, and Richard Crooks in Mayflower Ballroom.

By Hope Ridings Miller,

Society turned out full force yesterday for Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's ninety-eighth musical morning—the first of this season. Well before the appointed hour—11:15—the gilded ballroom of the Mayflower presented a crowded picture of diplomatic, official and residential notables assembeld to hear Bidu Sayoa, Brazilian soprano, and Richard Crooks, tenor—both stars of the Metropolitan Opera.

HOPE R. MILLER

Dowagers swathed in furs and decked out with diamonds . . . debutantes attired in the most fashionable of finery . . . diplomatic hostesses in towering turbans, fox capes or mink coats . . . more male celebrities than one expects to see at a morning concert—all these were part of yesterday's brilliant audience that also included two former "First Ladies," Mrs. William Howard Taft and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson; Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President's mother, and Getulio Vargas, son of the President of Brazil, who was there especially to hear his countrywoman. Young Vargas, incidentally, is studying chemistry at Johns Hopkins University this year.

For 15 or 16 years Mrs. Townsend's concerts have drawn the cream of Washington society. In fact, they have become such an important part of the Capital's social picture that, as someone expressed it yesterday, "You know the social season has really started when Mrs. Townsend cries her first 'bravo!' each year."

Brazilian Singer Captivates Audience Filled With Notables

Her initial "bravo!" yesterday was heard above the thundering applause following Miss Sayoa's third number, the aria, "Como Serenemente," from the opera "Lo Schiavo." But long before that the dainty Brazilian had captivated her audience. Wearing a trim dark blue lace frock and a small blue velvet hat set off with a long black plume, Miss Sayoa was both lovely to look at and delightful to hear. Her solos as well as the duets from "La Traviata" and "Manon," given with Mr. Crooks, were well received.

As an artist whom the Capital long ago proclaimed as one of its favorites, Mr. Crooks yesterday added more laurels to his crown of popularity. His duet with Miss Sayoa from "Romeo and Juliet" was a particularly successful surprise given as an encore. His "Mother Hubbard" number, another surprise, brought prolonged applause. Paul Ulanowsky was at the piano for Miss Sayoa's numbers. Stuart Ross accompanied Mr. Crooks.

Following the concert Mrs. Townsend, according to her custom, entertained at luncheon at the Mayflower in compliment to the artists.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, who usually attends only very small private luncheons, broke this rule yesterday to be present at the pleasant party gathered around a long poinsettia-trimmed table in the main dining room of the Mayflower.

Many Diplomats Present At Mrs. Townsend's Luncheon

Members of the Diplomatic Corps attending Mrs. Townsend's luncheon were the Ambassador of Peru, Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, the Chilean Ambassador, Manuel Trucco, and his daughter, Senorita Rebecca Trucco; the Minister of Guatemala, Dr. Adrian Recinos; the Minister of Colombia and Senora de Lopez; Mme. Lobo, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Brazil; Mlle. Zazi Aranha, daughter of the Brizilian Ambassador, and Mme. Aranha; Paulo G. Hasloscher, Decio de Moura and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. de Sousa Freitas, also of the Brazilian Embassy; Keith Officer, Australian Counselor of the British Embassy; Michal Budny, of the Polish Embassy; Anthony de Balasy, of the Hungarian Legation.

Other of Mrs. Townsend's luncheon guests were Mrs. Sumner Welles, Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat, Ralph Snowden Hill, U. S. Grant Smith, Robert Coe, Dr. Leon S. Roe, Waverly Taylor.

Also, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mme. van Kaathoven, Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Mrs. William Dawson, Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, Mrs. Franklin S. Terry, of New York; Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Paul Ulanowsky, Miss Mary Randolph and G. Denise.

Mrs. William Howard Taft was the ranking guest at Miss Janet Richards' luncheon for her cousin, Miss Mary Warner Refesbraugh, of Albany, N. Y. Other guests were Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. George C. Thorpe, Mrs. Parker W. West, Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton and Charles Mason Remey.

Mrs. Roper Present At Mrs. Doherty's Party

Mrs. Henry L. Doherty was among others entertaining luncheon guests following the concert. Mrs. Daniel C. Roper was in her party. Also, Mrs. Frederick W. Coleman and her sister, Mrs. C. C. Carter, wife of Colonel Carter of West Point; Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty and Mrs. Josephine Lambert.

Mrs. Charles L. McNary, wife of Senator McNary, of Oregon; and Mrs. Harry P. Huse were luncheon guests of Mrs. Charles O. Maas of New York. Others were Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Aymer Cater, Mrs. Nathaniel B. Dial and Mrs. William Wheatley.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Henry H. Hough were among the guests at Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed's luncheon following the concert. Another luncheon hostess was Mrs. John Walker Holcombe, who entertained in compliment to Mrs. Joseph Byron, of Hagerstown, Md. Among Mrs. Risley G. Hunt's guests were her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Gillette Hill, of Chicago, who are spending the holidays here.

Glimpsed among the hundreds attending the concert, in addition to those who were luncheon guests afterward, were Mrs. Richard Hamlin Jones, of Boston, Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, who arrived with four wives of Japanese Embassy staff members, and whose box was next to the one in which sat Miss Yoeh Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador. Next to Miss Wang was Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, who wore a snappy green ensemble.

Mrs. Charles Fairfax was in the audience, occupying the same seat she has had for years; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, in a smart black hat and trim coat to match, arrived with Mrs. Stanley Reed, who also wore black. Dr. Hans Thomsen of the German Embassy was glimpsed in the crowd. Also, Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador; Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Kurt Hetzel, Mrs. Jouett Shouse and her daughter, Miss Joan Dodd; Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne, Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mrs. Peyton March, Mrs. Charles D. Walcott, Mrs. Carlos del Mar, Mrs. Emil Hurja in one of the most attractive costumes there, a smart green fox-trimmed suit and a small green turban; Mrs. Tyner Dugdale with her mother, Mrs. Alonzo Tyner; Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Mrs. William M. Doak in a black suit trimmed in silver fox and an off-the-face black hat, and many, many others.

Miss Guila Bustabo, violinist, and Eugene List, pianist, will appear on the program at Mrs. Townsend's ninety-ninth musical morning, to take place next Monday.

Miss Aldrich Makes Her Bow

Appropriately enough the Congressional Club was the scene yesterday of a tea dance given by Representative and Mrs. Jesse P. Wolcott for their niece, Miss Fanchon Aldrich, of Port Huron, Mich., who joined the debutante contingent with the distinction of being the only "Congressional" member this season.

Miss Aldrich wore a pink chiffon dress, trimmed with a girdle of rhinestones and fashioned with a square neck and bouffant skirt which set off her loveliness to perfection. Her corsage was of pink roses.

Receiving with her was her aunt, Mrs. Wolcott, who wore a black velvet dress with a jacket, and a corsage of orchids. Also present was Miss Aldrich's cousin, Miss Farley Fane Ulrich, of Mount Clemens, Mich., who was gowned in black crepe with a gold jacket. She arrived only yesterday to be house guest of the Wolcotts this week.

Among those assisting Miss Aldrich were Miss Billie Gruman, Miss Mary Gruman, Miss Caroline Wadden, Miss Betty Burton, Miss Ann Mahoney, Miss Charlotte King, and Miss Marie Dimond, daughter of the Delegate from Alaska.

Mrs. Wolcott was assisted by Mrs. Joseph Herbert, jr., Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, wife of Representative Reed, of New York; Mrs. Harry Englebright, wife of Representative Englebright, of California; Mrs. Carl E. Mapes, wife of Representative Mapes, of Michigan; Mrs. Roy Woodruff, wife of Representative Woodruff, of Michigan; Mrs. Frank Crowther, wife of Representative Crowther, of New York; Mrs. Leon Truesdell and Mrs. Neitah King.

Virtually all of the Congressional set who had remained in Washington for the holidays were present at the affair.

This evening the Misses Billie and Mary Gruman, daughters of Mrs. W. A. Gruman, are giving an informal tea dance at their home in Miss Alorich's honor, with Sidney's Orchestra on hand to furnish the music.

John Roosevelt And Fiancee Steal Show at National

John Roosevelt, youngest son of the President, and Miss Anne Lindsay Clark, of Boston, virtually stole the show from Roland Young at the National Theater last night. Word they were present rippled through the distinguished audience with lightning speed and, from then on, heads were turned in their direction each time house lights were on.

Wearing a frock of black chiffon cut with a tight bodice and a full skirt, Miss Clark proved herself to be even more attractive in person than in photographs. She and Mr. Roosevelt arrived in a party of eight.

There were also many other notables in the audience. More debutantes than have been at the National this season were on hand, enjoying the show as part of their holiday round of activities. To mention a few, Miss Jane Acheson, wearing a wine-colored crepe dress, was there, arriving with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson. The Misses Ann Carroll and Eleanor Eastbourne Meem came with Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean and her daughter, Miss Evalyn McLean; Miss Marian Kirk, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Alan Kirk, was another deb noted in the crowd.

Washington's older set was well represented. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend were present, the latter wearing a black taffeta dress, trimmed in beige, and long beige gloves. They came especially to see the performance of Miss Lillian Emerson, daughter of Mrs. Townsend's friend, Mrs. Franklin S. Terry, of New York.

Mrs. Tracy Dows, in a black frock and velvet coat topped with an ermine cape, was there; also the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Victor Mallet; Mrs. Charles C. Glover; Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell, who wore a stunning dark red wool dress with a velvet lined cape trimmed in gray fox, was with Mrs. George Allen. Mrs. Cary T. Grayson was another glimpsed at intermission; also Decio de Moura, of the Brazilian Embassy; Robert Lincoln O'Brien, and many more.

Give Party Today.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith will entertain today for their son, Arthur Clarendon Smith, jr., who is a student at Washington and Lee University and is in town for the holidays.

Dudley Gregory Honored at Tea

Guests tied on their best bibs and fastened their best tuckers for the debut tea-dance given at the Sulgrave Club yesterday by Miss Marian Stevens for her niece, Miss Dudley Gregory, daughter of Mrs. George D. Gregory. Later, Mrs. Gregory entertained at supper for her daughter, the girls assisting her, and their escorts.

Wearing a gown of turquoise blue velvet and carrying an old-fashioned bouquet, Miss Gregory more than held up the tradition of the season for attractive debs. Mrs. Gregory, who received with her, was gowned in black velvet and wore a corsage of orchids. Miss Stevens was in reddish velvet and also had a corsage of orchids.

Out-of-town girls as well as members of Washington's younger set assisted Miss Gregory. They were Miss Roberta Marshall, of Philadelphia; Miss Patricia Reynolds, of New York, and Miss Mildred Rhett, of Charleston, S. C. Of this city were Miss Louise Burke, Miss Peggy Lincoln, Miss Helen Lippitt, Miss Florence Merrill, Miss Betty Nash and Miss Mary Alice Sturdevant.

Those assisting Miss Stevens during the afternoon were Miss Alys Downing, Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap, Mrs. John S. Flannery, Mrs. Ernest Graves, Mrs. Thomas Hart, Baroness Korff, Mrs. Ridley McLean, Miss Eloise Sargent, Mrs. Frederick Folger, Miss Virginia M. Flannery, Miss Isabel Fontaine Flannery, Miss Anne Dudley Flannery and Mrs. Whelan Vaughan.

Hardly had the last dance been filed away under pleasant memories than the second part of Miss Gregory's debut program got under way in the Blue Room at the Shoreham, where the supper was given for her and her assistants.

Miss Gregory, whose social career was thus "officially" launched in a whirl of partying yesterday, has attended Potomac School, Miss Madeira's and Ashley Hall.

Mrs. Hodgkins Named To Clubs Federation

Former President of D. C. Group Elected Director to Fill Out Term of Mrs. Harvey; Vote for Capital Indorsed at Meeting.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

Mrs. Howrd L. Hodgkins, former president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, and honorary vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, yesterday was elected director from the District to the General Federation to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley. Mrs. Hodgkins' election and the vote favoring a resolution from the General Federation to Congress calling for national representation for the District of Columbia, constituted the chief business of the December meeting of the District Federation, held at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Both matters were carried over from the November session and were the subject of heated discussion then and at yesterday's meeting, although the alignment on both had been definitely decided in the intervening period through the action of individual clubs.

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the federation, presided at the morning and afternoon sessions. The vote of the executive board in favor of the resolution for national representation was 35 to 17. Those opposed to the action announced a minority report would be sent to the executive board of the General Federation.

Mrs. Ferguson Makes Nomination

Mrs. Hodgkins' name was placed in nomination for the office of director by Mrs. Charles Ferguson of the Entre Nous Club, of which Mrs. Hodgkins is a member and former president and which had unanimously endorsed her. Mrs. Virginia White Speel promptly seconded the nomination and representatives from other clubs which had endorsed her followed with their seconds in quick succession. Mrs. W. W. Husband, who had been unanimously endorsed as a candidate by the Housekeepers Alliance was nominated by Mrs. Tilman B. Parks and seconds followed rapidly for her nomination also. The polls were open from 12 until 2 and the result of the election announced just before the close of the afternoon meeting.

After Mrs. Husband's name had been proposed, it was announced by one of her friends that she had expressed a desire to withdraw, but, as she was not present, the two nominations remained to be voted on. Mrs. Charles P. Keyser was chairman of the elections committee, assisted by Mrs. Otto Hammerlund, Mrs. John C. Kondrup, Mrs. Pierce B. Ashburn and Mrs. Mattie Ewing.

Mrs. Hodgkins was present at the meeting, dressed in a costume of black with a white knitted blouse, on which were the pins of the various organizations with which she is prominently identified. There was the General Federation pin of the design used at the time she was State president of the District, years ago; the present pin of the federation; that of the P. E. O., in which she was founder and first president of Chapter B of Washington; the pin of the American Women's Legion and the class pin of the Mount Vernon Seminary of which she is an alumna. She is a member of the Colonial Dames as well as holding the honorary national vice presidency of the D. A. R.

Term Expires Next Spring

Her term as director to the General Federation will expire in May and then the District will vote again on a director who will represent it at the triennial convention of the national organization in Kansas City, Mo. Mrs. Wiley's resignation, submitted when she left for a world tour, made necessary yesterday's election. It had been tabled at the November meeting and was accepted on the motion of Mrs. Jason Waterman.

There was no speaker at yesterday morning's session, but a musical program provided a pleasant interlude between it and the afternoon meeting. Many of the club members also remained for luncheon in the Roosevelt dining room. Mrs. Leon Truesdell, president of the Rubinstein Club, who was in charge of the program, presented Miss Frances Fallon, chairman of auditions for the Rubinstein chorus, who sang three groups, and her daughter, Miss Constance Truesdell, who is home from Mount Holyoke for the holidays, who played three groups of violin solos. Mrs. Truesdell accompanied them both. A third artist was Miss Phoebe Stine, president of the Capitol Hill History Club, who sang, accompanied by Prof. Burton Carr, a cousin of Mrs. Biddle, who has contributed to the federation's musical programs on several occasions.

In the afternoon, Mrs. George C. Thorpe, of the Woman's Safety Committee of the American Automobile Association, addressed the federation on safety measures as accident prevention.

Pink Hats for Winter.

An attractive way to add color to your mid-season dark coat and one already sponsored by Hollywood, is the pink hat in suede or felt. Flattering new shades of pink are appearing for just this purpose and are an excellent foil for black, brown, gray, wine and navy. For town wear, the pink may be echoed in a simple frock of sheer wool. For cruise and resort wardrobes, the pink chapeau is a smart change from the conventional white and natural tones.

Gives Luncheon Friday.

The executive committee of the Vincent B. Costello Post of the American Legion will be the luncheon guests of Col. Julius I. Peyser, the commander of Costello Post, at the Carlton Hotel Friday, December 31, at 1:30 p. m.

Women's Clubs Founder Speaks on Religion and Democracy.

Mrs. Mary Eno Stewart, daughter of Mrs. Mary Mumford, of Philadelphia, who was among the founders of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and one of the first women members of a board of education, yesterday afternoon was guest of honor and speaker at the tea given by the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women. "Religion and its relation to Democracy" was the subject of her lecture, one of a series she has delivered this winter in New York City.

"Democracy must be understood to be defended and expanded in contrast to other philosophies of the day," Mrs. Stewart declared. "It is the only thing between us and another dark age."

Brotherhood, she pointed out, demands that there be mutual confidences, freedom and friendliness of feeling. She urged the application of Christian principles to business as a solution for economic ills. "Let's stop giving lip service and make it the real and vital thing that it is," she said.

In her opinion, only the practical demonstration of Christianity in the economic life of the country can preserve democracy in the face of the trend toward either fascism or communism seen in the modern world. Among ancient people, religion was closely allied to daily life, she said, and among individuals and nations, men in their extremity turn to a power outside of themselves, whatever name they may have for God. This applies to times of economic as well as other distress, she added, and may mean the way out of difficulties today.

Mrs. Stewart was introduced by Mrs. Richard Hogue, president of the Washington Branch of the A. A. U. W. She is here spending the holidays with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Stewart, who were among guests at the tea. Miss Maxine Girts was hostess for the afternoon.

The department also will sponsor a bingo party Saturday evening, January 8, at 8 o'clock at the Thomas Circle Club.

Mrs. Goodman, before her marriage, was Miss Mary Patricia Cass.

By Suzanne.

THE RADIO broadcasts of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which are in charge of Mrs. Edgar B. Merrit, radio chairman both for the general and District federations, may be held twice monthly as they were last year, Mrs. Merrit announced at the district federation meeting yesterday.

There will be only one program in January, but she expects to plan two for February and through the remainder of the season. The program January 20, from 4:30 to 5 over WMAL, will include talks by J. Edgar Hoover, Judge Camille Kelly, of Memphis, Tenn., on juvenila court work, and by Maud Ballington Booth. The speaker from the federation will be Mrs. Clarence Frame, chairman of welfare. The D. C. Federation program will be presented at 2 o'clock on January 14, with Representative Martin Dies, of Texas, the speaker.

Mrs. Merrit, who has just returned from New York, where she spent Christmas, wore a holiday costume yesterday—a knitted frock of wine color with a white blouse in which was a diamond-shaped figure of the same shade and a matching hat. On the collar of her black coat was a little spray of holly, which also harmonized with the color scheme.

Another was Miss Maud Russell, who returned to this country from China last February and is now in charge of the Y. W. C. A.'s China Fund. She will remain in America until the late spring when she expects to go back to the Orient to resume her work. One of her reasons for coming to Washington for the holidays was to visit Dr. Anne Seesholtz, of the board of directors of the local Y. W. C. A. and chairman of its religious life committee, who also has spent some time in China.*

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl With Several Beaux Has 'Really Fallen' for One; Should She Admit Love? Give Him Her Picture?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 20, going to college here. My home is in a Western State. Not very long ago I met a young man of 22 who is a student at the college I am attending. I have quite a number of friends of both sexes and am quite popular at school, and although I still go out with other boys, I have been having several dates a week with this young man and have really fallen for him.

He seems to think quite a lot of me and I don't want to do or say anything that would make him think less of me. There are a number of questions I would like to ask you. Should I tell him I care for him? So far, he doesn't know my true feelings, as he says I always keep him guessing. As I said before, I go out with other boys (for while I am not boy crazy, I do enjoy the company of men) but I do not allow them to kiss me. However, when I am with this one boy, he kisses me quite frequently. As a modern girl, I have been kissed many times, but since knowing him, I cannot bear to have anyone else touch me.

* * * *

He doesn't object to my going out with other boys, but I am afraid he will not like me so well if I do so often. Do you think I should tell him I do not let the other boys kiss me? I don't want him to think I allow all boys the same privilege.

* * * *

Also, the question of an exchange of pictures has come up. In speaking of a Christmas gift, he said he didn't think I would want a picture of him. I said I would love to have his picture to keep in my room. Then he said he wouldn't give me his picture unless I gave him one of myself. I half promised him I would do so, but after thinking it over, I don't know what to do.

* * * *

I have never given my picture to a boy and I feel that our friendship is not sufficiently well established to warrant my giving him one. Then, too, he told me that only one other girl has ever given him a picture of herself, and that although he isn't going with her now, he still has her picture. I must say I don't like the idea of my picture being on display in his room, where all the boys in his dormitory could see it. However, I have a room with a family and while his picture on my dressing table would mean much to me, it would not be on display to a dormitory full of girls. What do you think I should do with regard to these several questions that are preplexing me? Yours very truly,

UNCERTAIN.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Dr. John Arnold Rockwell, sometime medical adviser at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, told the All-Unity students' conference in Boston last spring; "If some one takes your girl out and you don't feel the urge to punch him on the nose—Well! You're not in love." Inasmuch as I am inclined to believe Dr. Rockwell speaks the truth in a nutshell, I don't think your 22-year-old admirer is as deeply interested in you as you are in him, or he would already have raised some objections to your going about with other boys, while supposedly in love with him. I have no doubt he does think you are in love with him, since you welcome his caresses, permit him to call several times a week, and seemed delighted at the prospect of having his picture. I suspect he is simply engaging in a campus flirtation with an impressionable, emotionally intense young lady—whose very intensity has put him rather on guard against involving himself too deeply.

* * * *

It would be a mistake to tell him you "care for him" until he presses the question, declares himself in love with you, and asks you to discard all other suitors for him. It would be an equal mistake to attempt to explain the nature of your relations with your other admirers. If you are not promiscuous with your favors, he probably knows it anyway. Rumors have a way of getting about in masculine circles concerning a girl's vulnerability or invulnerability in the matter of casual love making.

* * * *

So long as he doesn't try to argue you out of going with other fellows, don't concern yourself unduly about whether he is going to appreciate you more or less for accepting counter-invitations. The greatest mistake you could make, in the early stages of this friendship, would be to show that you are too eager to please him. A man likes best the girl who puts him on his mettle to please her. He seldom runs much of a temperature over the girl who is on the qui vive to anticipate his every unspoken hope and preference.

* * * *

About your picture—don't give it. A girl's picture is a most intimate gift, which should only be entrusted into the hands of a man who feel for her, and for her good name, a most exclusive, protective and cherishing devotion. She should never give it to a man whose devotion to her is open to the slightest question; nor to a man about whom she knows virtually nothing, so far as his background and personal ethics are concerned. Her picture is a gift which should be reserved for her fiance; or which might be given for old association's sake to a boy whom she had known since her pig-tail days, and who was as near and dear to her as a brother. If this boy is willing to give his picture unconditionally, take it and thank him for it; but don't try to maneuver him into giving it to you. M. H.

New Bath Preparations Come in Fancy Bottles

From the looks of the bath preparations now on the market, it would seem that all of the liquor bottles had deserted the bars and gone over to cosmetics. One excellent example of this is a round wine decanter used to contain the new Seventeen eau de cologne, which by the way, is also out to imitate beverage colors. To complete the illusion, silver cords securely bind the white covered neck of the bottle and two red wax seals decorate one side.

Sheared Lamb Coats.

Sheared lamb in the fascinating pale butter color are all the rage on campuses from Maine to Seattle, according to stylists. The majority of them are plaid lined, and are being worn for classroom, hiking, skiing, and informal shopping tripe in town.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

ONE OF THE signs of the holiday season here is the influx of those movie stars who can bribe or cut their way out of the Hollywood stockades and rush off to New York for a mid-winter visit. Joan Crawford has been splashing the city with her particular brand of glamour, and after being joined by her Franchot and his mother, Mrs. Tone, considerably brightened the local holiday from an optical point of view.

ALICE HUGHES.

Another holiday visitor has been Rosalind Russell, who is certainly one of the finest of the younger movie troupers. Roz is a home-town girl, and the other day I lunched with her and her sister Clara LaRoche, who is society editor of Town and Country. Clara's pet name for Rosalind is The Duchess. Eating a midday meal with an actress is always faintly surprising, no matter how often the experience is repeated. For instance, I had been up since the pop of dawn, had done a morning's wash, and so on, and ordered a regular luncheon. I noted that La Russell, however, started the repast with coffee and then worked slowly into a dish of oatmeal. Breakfast for her, of course!

Rosalind stole most of the stares in the eating-house, owing to the smart attire which set off her natural beauty. She wore a deep winered sombrero hat, a dress of the same color, and a brown beaver coat. Small wonder that few of the men in the place could keep their minds on their scallops and tartar sauce!

A lovely girl, this Miss Russell, and briny, too. But sh! Don't tell Hollywood! They don't always pay off on grey matter in the movies!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Checking the holiday book situation, I find that two tomes now rest on most of the smart library tables—Cecil Beaton's "Scrapbook" and Helen Brown Norden's "The Hussy's Handbook." But mind you, I don't recommend them especially as gifts for Aunt Hatty! They're more for what some people call "sophisticates," whatever they are!

* * * *

Oh dear me, we don't have troubles enough here, with our jammed traffic, mad drivers and leaping pedestrians! Now we are threatened with a taxi strike—and if it affects a good percentage of our 15,000 hack drivers, the big town will suffer a severe attack of galloping paralysis!

* * * *

The handsome Grover Whalen, head of our on-rushing World's Fair, is having his busiest winter. The other day he paused in his fair-business long enough to announce the engagement of his pretty daughter, Mary, to Mr. Bob Saul, of the nearby city of Philadelphia. Mary is a senior at Bryn Mawr, and is a real Irish beauty. . . .

* * * *

Thanks to his "Christmas Carol," the memory of Charles Dickens always comes brightly alive at this time of year, and our big crowd of Dickensians always does him some special honor. This year they were wildly proud and happy because they could have as a dinner guest at the Hotel Astor his very own grand-daughter, Enid Dickens Hawksley, who was here on a brief visit from England!

* * * *

We have a huge collection of fine Swedish restaurants already, and now another has just opened. It is called "The Garbo," after someone or other, and the management tells me it hopes none of the customers wants to be alone.

* * * *

The Metropolitan Opera is springing debut after debut on its addicts, among the latest being the first American bow of Zinka Milanov, a soprano from Jugoslavia. She sang here for the first time in the dear old Verdi Warhorse, "Il Trovatore," and was greeted tolerantly by the choosy critics.

* * * *

Style-consciousness now rages in the kitchen, I find. The other day my weary eyes rested on dish towels made of white linen crash, and gayly imprinted with brightly colored geraniums! Selling like crazy, too, the man tells me—and certainly a bright note for any kitchen, but I'll bet drying dishes is the same old bore, posies or no posies!

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE WEEK between Christmas and New Year's marks an interlude in slimming in which you may easily gain 5 pounds. It is only natural that you should want to wait until the new year to resume the struggle with curves and calories; but if you put off your dieting until then, it will be like beginning over.

A calorie spree not only breaks down your resistance to the good things, but the physical effects are a stretched tummy and an increasingly voracious appetite. The more you eat, the more you want to eat

If you begin to gain, there is just one thing to do about it—go on the fruit regime. This is not easy, but those of you who have the courage to go on the regime at once will never really have to worry about losing your figures. You have more than the average fund of will-power and you will not let yourselves gain beyond a certain point.

Those of you who need a bolster for your failing will-power will find it in outdoor activity. These leisurely days afford more opportunities for staying in the fresh air, and a brisk walk of a mile or two will tone your lazy muscles and put you on your toes mentally.

If you can manage to do so, supplement your walk with sports activity. Otherwise, you will need a few circulation jogging exercises. Here is one of the best:

POSITION: Standing, with the knees slightly bent for a spring into the air. Let the arms hang down at the sides.

MOVEMENT: Leap into the air, straightening the knees and kicking one leg as straight out at the side as high as you can get it. At the same time, fling the arms up at the sides in a gesture of exhilaration. Repeat the exercise, alternating legs in the sideward kick. Continue until you are pleasantly tired.

Mood of Dress Should Change With Type of Entertainment

By Ethel Ehlen.

AS the season advances one realizes that not only is it necessary to assume many personalities to keep up with the vagaries of the formal evening mode, but the styling of the ensemble should be in keeping with the type of after-dark entertainment you follow. For instance, if dancing is your forte, then select gowns in which the style interest is concentrated on the skirt. Whether you are swirling in the graceful steps of the new waltzes or doing the more energetic Big Apple, the skirt should be full and flaring. If you dance especially well and want to call attention to that fact, then be sure that your evening creations have dramatic hemlines.

For formal dining, it is the above-the-table portion of the gown which matters most. Consequently the bodice should be the primary consideration. Here you can concentrate on glitter and glamour by way of sequins, rhinestones or gold embroidery, in the interpretation that suits your personal preference. Or, adorn an otherwise simple-bodiced gown with your favorite collection of jewels—according to the fashion dictates this winter, one cannot wear too much jewelry. Coiffures, too, are of paramount interest for an evening in this category; be sure the hair is styled in the new upsweeping lines with some kind of dramatic head-dress for distinctive accent.

Receptions, the theater and the like give you a chance to wear sophisticated gowns, those in which the entire length of the creation is on parade; gowns in which line is the foremost consideration. This is an excellent chance to wear period-influenced affairs or the gracefully form-fitting versions for which Alix is noted; an ideal opportunity to wear swishy trains. Wraps to top any of these three important classifications should be governed by the styling and materials of the gown. Short fur jackets are much in evidence, also fur capes of finger-tip length, and the full-length fitted coat of velvet or brocade.

New Infant Cosmetics Are Placed on Market

Believing that beauty begins in cradle days and that an early start in scientific skin care is absolutely necessary, some new preparations for the baby have been placed on the market—pasteurized milk bath, a delicate dusting powder, and an antiseptic body oil. The trio would make a nice Christmas present for some youngster on your gift list. They make a beauty ritual of the daily nursery routine, according to experts, and besides are blended so that tender skins are not irritated, bu kept soft, lovaly and healthy.

Resort Hats.

Leghorn straw made in bonnet-fashion and tied under the chin, berets given height by stiff bows, and ribbon turbans in unique treatments, are the highlights in the hat realm for resort wear, according to a recent survey. There seems to be a trend toward intricate simplicity, even for millinery usually classed as tailored.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Anatomy of Nails.

THE NAILS are very ingenious devices of nature. For the animals, tooth and claw are almost equally important for defense, offense, and tearing food apart. Men still find these terminal facilities of the fingers useful, although our toenails are no longer any good to us. The toenails are undoubtedly undergoing degeneration and atrophy; in most people hardly any nail except the nail of the big toe is more than a thin paperlike disc. We may predict that in the course of evolution, if civilization continues in its present shoe-wearing state, the toenails will completely disappear.

The finger nails, however, are different. In a thousand ways, from opening a knife blade to scratching a deposit off your clothes, it is convenient to have these hardened flat blades at the end of the fingers.

Anatomically nails, like hairs, ar simply adaptations of the skin. The epidermis of the skin is made up of flat cells, intimately adherent to each other and containing a hard substance known as keratin. The nails simply have more of this hard substance—they have been called the skeleton of the skin cells. They are still more intimately packed together than the skin cells, and the keratin changes to a somewhat different chemical substance, usually called "onychin." It is not affected by weak alkalis or weak acids.

The nail arises from a fold in the skin, which in certain respects corresponds to the hair root. But the nail is nourished, and perhaps formed, from all the skin bed underneath it until the point where becomes free. The upper surface of the nail is smooth, but the under surface presents a number of longitudinal parallel ridges which fit into similar depressions in the nail bed.

If this explanation is true, it supports the idea that all the nail cells arise from the root cells in the skin at the base.

Leaders Seek Quick Defeat of War Plebiscite

Would Get Ludlow Bill Out of Way to Make U. S. Position Clear.

By the Associated Press.

Influenced, they said, by the international situation, House Democratic leaders disclosed yesterday they would seek an early House vote on the proposed constitutional amendment to require a national referendum before Congress could declare war.

These leaders said the proposal would be defeated and a quick vote should be taken to clear up any misunderstanding in other countries of Congressional sentiment.

A petition, signed by 218 members, designed to force the House to go on record on the issue, can be called up for a vote January 10.

Ludlow May Seek Delay.

While the party leadership arranged for an early vote, Representative Ludlow (Democrat), Indiana, author of the amendment, said some sentiment had developed for postponing a House test. A group of members will meet soon after Congress reconvenes, he said, to determine whether a delay should be sought.

Both President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull have opposed the amendment, the former calling it inconsistent with the representative form of Government.

During the day, former Gov. Alf M. Landon's recent indorsement of President Roosevelt's foreign policies brought a sharp rebuke from Representative Fish (Republican), New York, ranking minority member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

"Gov. Landon, who knows less than nothing about international issues and amply demonstrated that fact in the last campaign," Fish said in a statement, "rushed to the defense of the President, slamming members of Congress without the faintest knowledge of the situation."

Fish Opposes "Free Hand."

Although he asserted "all Americans regardless of party affiliations should applaud the able handling of the Panay incident by Secretary Hull," Fish declared the international "motives and moves" of the President "must be analyzed and tested without regard to partisanship . . ."

"I do not agree," the New Yorker said, "with such ardent internationalists, or League of Nations supporters, as Mr. Henry Stimson, Col. House and Norman Davis, who want to give the Administration a free hand to enter into concerted action to quarantine other nations, which would involve us in every European and Asiatic war.

"Ninty per cent of the American people desire to be isolated from international blood feuds, boundary disputes and war . . . They know that if we do attempt to police China we would be holding the bag and would be expected to pay the bills and do all the fighting."

Canal Zone Guard Reported Doubled In 'Fear' of War

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Peter Miller, Panama newspaperman, said today war fears have caused the Panama Canal Zone guard to be doubled.

"For the first time United States Army guards have been posted at the Madden Dam, and patrol ships have been assigned to duty on the Gatun Lake and the Pedro Miguel Lock," said Miller, who arrived by the Grace liner Santa Barbara.

"Fifteen additional airplanes have been brought down for the Army to guard the Pacific Ocean side of the Canal, and 12 planes for the Navy for duty on the Atlantic side."

He said a general boycott of Japanese products had cut Japanese imports by more than $400,000.

Italy Seizes 10 as Ring Importing Fake Dollars

Genoa Italy, Dec. 27 (AP).—Police today arrested 10 persons charged with bringing counterfeit American money and securities into Italy, where they were exchanged for Italian currency.

There were no Americans in the ring, police said, but it was believed to have accomplices in America. American police were notified. Authorities said the band destroyed $10,000 in counterfeit money before the capture.

Mrs. Dahl Asks Liberty For Flier as Yule Gift

Paris, Dec. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Harold E. Dahl sent a Christmas appeal to Insurgent Generalissimo Franco today to "take advantage of this season of the year" to release her husband, 28-year-old Champaign, Ill., aviator.

Dahl, shot down by insurgents in July while flying for the Spanish government, was sentenced to death by a court-martial and immediately reprieved by Franco in October. The American flier has been recuperating in a Salamanca hospital.

First Lady D.C.-Bound After Seattle Holiday

Alleged Kin of Kresge Arrested for Forgery

New York, Dec. 27 (U.P.).—A man who gave his name as George Kresge, 23, of Providence, R. I., and claimed to be a nephew of S. S. Kresge, wealthy five and ten cent chain store owner, was held by police tonight on a forgery charge.

14 Brazilian Fascists, Propaganda Seized

Aides of Hull Deny 'Secret' Panay Accord

All Japanese Assurances Published, U. S. State Department Says.

On the other hand, the Tokyo dispatches may have had reference to something which transpired in the conference which Ambassador Grew had with the Japanese naval and military spokesmen. His report to the State Department regarding that conference has not been made public.

But in Tokyo and here it is understood the Japanese naval and military spokesmen called on Grew chiefly to lay before him their findings regarding the bombing and sinking of the Panay in an effort to persuade the American Ambassador that the incident resulted from a mistake. Whether these officers made any pledges on behalf of their respective services has not been revealed, although it is taken for granted that they expressed the regret of the Japanese army and navy and may have asserted that steps were being taken to prevent a repetition of such an incident.

Meanwhile, this Government regards the Panay incident as closed, except for determination of the amount of indemnification which Japan will be called on to pay. Secretary Hull said this matter was now under consideration but that no specific figures had been determined on so far.

Reports from Shanghai that the Japanese military authorities had promulgated decrees subjecting all foreigners in the Japanese-controlled areas of China to their military law may, however, precipitate another incident with the Tokyo government. Under treaties between this Government and China, Americans enjoy extraterritorial rights in that country.

Thus, under those treaties, an American violating a law has the right of trial before an American consul, or in a mixed court in which Americans have representation. Disputes involving only Americans are tried in a United States District Court in China. Should the Japanese undertake to set aside any of these American rights, this Government would be certain to protest promptly.

Military Envoy May Mean Red Aid for China

By the Associated Press.

Hankow, China, Dec. 27.—Foreign diplomats today saw in the arrival of the new Soviet ambassador to China, a soldier rather than a diplomat, indications that closer military relations between China and Russia were in prospect.

Ivan Tewfimovitch Luganets-Orelsky, 38 years old, arrived Sunday by airplane from Langchow, capital of Kansu Province in China's far northwest.

Arrangements were in progress for an early meeting with China's leader, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, at the latter's headquarters at an undisclosed spot in the mid-Yangtze Valley.

Of particular interest to other diplomats was the fact that Luganets-Orelsky was several weeks on his journey from Moscow to Hankow, apparently spending much time along the great continental highway from Russian Turkestan across Chinese Turkestan (Sinkiang) and Kansu, along which any material Russian aid for China must flow.

(Reports reaching Shanghai recently said hundreds of thousands of coolies were working on the motor road from Lanchow to the Russian border to make it fit for heavy military transport. Japan's invasion of Chahar and Suiyan provinces has cut the old caravan route between North China and Siberia by way of Outer Mongolia.)

Oil Firms May Flout Mexican Wage Order

Mexico, City, Dec. 27 (U.P.).—The Boletin Financiero, usually well-informed in financial matters, said today American and other foreign oil companies here would reject a recent government ruling which ordered wage increases of $7,300,000 annually.

The order, affecting 18,000 workers in the $400,000,000 industry, was issued despite warnings from the companies that if the wage-and-hour recommendations of a board of experts which investigated the concerns' vnancial capacity were upheld, operations in this country would be abandoned or at least greatly curtailed.

Loyalist Shells Hammer 6,000 In Teruel Fort

Walls of Medieval Piles Where Rebels Hide Crumble, Burn.

By the Associated Press.

Teruel, Spain, Dec. 27.—Smoke and flames tonight rolled out of three thick-walled medieval buildings where 6,000 persons were reported desperately waiting a rebel counter-offensive to rescue them.

The buildings were crumbling under the pounding of government artillery, which set the upper floors afire.

The old structures dominate the city and from their windows snipers took pot shots at those braving the streets of the government-captured city. Government attacks with grenades, tanks and machine guns have been repulsed by withering machine gune fire from within.

Communiques to rebel headquarters near the French border at Hendaye said a counterattack had pushed within a mile and a quarter of Teruel, and that a radio message from the garrison reported sufficient munitions and food to continue the defense.

Three thousand of those in the insurgent citadels were said to be German, Italian and Spanish officers and soldiers; the rest were men, women and about 150 children. The civilians were said to have sought refuge in the seminary when retreating rebels arrived shouting "the Russians are coming."

The seminary, once used for the education of priests and later converted into a rebel garrison, is a seven-floor building with three floors under ground. In addition the rebels were quartered in the civil governor's palace and another building.

Over 5,000 prisoners have been taken by the government at Teruel. Unable to bear the lack of food and water, 913 insurgents gave up the civil barracks and a nearby church two days ago.

Russia Considers Submarine Trip To the North Pole

Moscow, Dec. 27 (AP).—Soviet authorities hinted today a submarine expedition to the North Pole was being considered as the next step toward establishing regular airplane service from Russia over the pole to the United States.

Officials said submarines could carry men and equipment for the establishment of landing fields in the central polar basin, as well as go to the help of planes forced down along the route.

British Sea Lord To Lead in China

London, Dec. 27 (AP).—The admiralty announced tonight Vice Admiral Sir Percy Noble, fourth sea lord and chief of supplies and transport, would leave immediately after the holidays to become commander in chief of the China station.

Admiral Noble, regarded as a man of action, is to go directly to Hongkong. That colony now is considered the principal danger spot for British interests in the Far East because of an imminent Japanese drive against nearby Canton, South China metropolis.

French Freighter Saved From Rebels

Perpignan, France, Dec. 27 (AP).—The French destroyer Vauquelin today rescued the French freighter Yolande from two Spanish insurgent cruisers.

The Yolande was en route from Marseille to Barcelona when stopped by the insurgent cruisers Canarias and Almirante Cervera. The insurgents accused the French vessel of transporting arms to government Spain.

The freighter's wireless appeal for help brought the destroyer to the rescue. The Yolande was escorted back to France.

Alert Girl Traps Two in Holdups

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 27.—Police held two men today in connection with two holdups as the result of the alertness of Miss Doris Smith, 25-year-old clerk in the office of the United Small Loan Corporation, one of two establishments visited by bandits within two days last week.

Miss Smith spotted a handsome young man who danced near her at a Washington highway inn Christmas night as the "ashy blond with gold in his teeth" who she said held up the loan company Wednesday and escaped with $696. Police Chief R. B. Jordan said the loan company holdup and the looting of the Knights of Columbus safe a week ago were solved.

can people who are in casual observation apparently sane, two University of Cincinnati scientists told the association.

Prof. James Vaughn and Othilda Krug discovered this by testing a group of 43 patients in an Ohio mental hospital and another group, comparable in size, of college students. As a result it appears that a large number of supposedly normal people should trade places with a number of insane patients in mental hospitals, they declared.

"Apparently normal people and psychotics resemble one another in many respects," said Prof. Vaughn, such as their degree of adjustment to society, intelligence, ideas of persecution and grandeur, analytical ability and originality, and introversion and extraversion of personality.

The insane patients showed evidence of greater disassociation and less agreement with their environment "but it is surprising to find so many apparently normal people presenting similar tendencies," the Cincinnati scientists reported.

A mysterious new chemical, made by injured yeast cells, which heals severe burns quickly and without scars, was reported to the association today.

The chemical, a fluid, grows fresh, normal skin over the burned areas, instead of the usual, disfiguring scar tissue. It is a by-product of discovery of a new principle of tissue growth at the institution Divi Thomae, of Cincinnati. The discoveries were made by George Sperry Sperti, John R. Loofbourow, John C. Fardon, Andre Cueto and Elton Cook.

1937 Building For Arlington Near 7 Millions

Colonial Village, Buckingham and Postoffice Among Major Operations.

Building operations in Arlington County during 1937 will reach close to $7,000,000, as predicted in this column on January 1 of this year, it was indicated yesterday.

One of the largest projects which have been completed is the Colonial Village development, 974 apartments costing a little under $4,000. The second, which is now well under way, is the Buckingham Communities development, which, when completed, will have 2,000 apartments.

Another major development is the Arlington Central Postoffice Building, completed at a cost to the Federal Government of $200,000.

Other operations include a junior high school costing $243,900, an elementary school at Highland Park and one at East Falls Church, each of which cost $44,000, and the central office building now under construction for the Clarendon offices of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia, on North Irving street in Clarendon. This building, including equipment, will represent an outlay of $1,000,000.

C. of C. Group Meets Today.

The committee of the Chamber of Commerce to study and revise the by-laws, of which Walter U. Varney is chairman, will meet this afternoon in the chamber's offices in Clarendon. Other members of the committee are Thomas W. Philips, Roger B. Sprigg, John F. Webster and Richard M. Smith.

Lights Installed.

Street lights were installed by the Braddock Light & Power Co., at the intersection of Lee boulevard and North Arlington Ridge road in Rosslyn yesterday. Other lights along the boulevard at points considered dangerous will be installed by the county as soon as equipment can be delivered.

Girl Scouts to Gather.

The newly organized Girl's Scout Troop No. 106 will meet tonight in the James Monroe School Auditorium at Aurora Heights.

Business Group Called.

administration of justice," and "unwarranted interference." He said results of Geiger's action were to "free the companies from any present necessity of correcting objectionable practices, to save them from indictment for past violations of antitrust laws, and to discredit the efforts of the Government to correct abuses in the industry." He insisted the consent decree would not have been a compromise—but would have corrected all the abuses charged.

The lively verbal battle over the monopoly problem broke new ground yesterday in another quarter when Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, suggested that the forthcoming Senate investigation of unemployment and relief be broadened to include monopoly in its various phases. The inquiry will begin January 4, day after Congress convenes.

Agrees With Jackson.

In a separate statement, Borah expressed "accord" with the anti-monopoly views expressed by Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson in a radio address Sunday night, when Jackson asserted monopolistic profiteering had been in great measure responsible for the business slump, through fixing of crushingly high prices.

Borah, long-time monopoly foe, said, however, that in his opinion the "laws on the statute books now, if properly enforced, would go far toward breaking up monopoly. But we have never been willing to enforce them. We do not enforce them as we do other laws. If more legislation is necessary, very well and good—let's have it."

In New York, where Jackson's specific criticism of the steel industry was closely analyzed, William B. Warner, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, said he hoped Jackson's "expressed antipathy to business" was not the official Government view, the Associated Press said. Warner added:

"American industry believes in free domestic competition based on private initiative and energy."

House Quiz Certain.

The Geiger-Cummings affair almost certainly will result in vigorous scrutiny of the Justice Department's tactics in the auto-finance cases, it was believed here. Geiger said, in his dismissal:

"It is my idea that the Department of Justice did not have the power to negotiate with these parties for a consent decree. I thought it highly improper for the parties to get together during the period the grand jury was in recess."

He said he had been extremely surprised to learn the grand jury had recessed its 13-week investigation to accommodate the department in some action relative to the framing of a consent decree. Geiger, 70, is known as extremely strict in his rulings on legal ethics. Chairman Hatton W. Sumner, of the House Judiciary Committee, has promised an early committee session to consider the Geiger case.

Gales, Rain Sweep Pacific Northwest

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 27 (AP).—Gales and heavy rains swept the Pacific Northwest tonight, hampering communication and traffic.

Northwest Oregon and southwestern Washington were hard hit. The heaviest rain in 26 years deluged Portland with nearly 6 inches in 33 hours and a blizzard raged in the Oregon highlands.

New Quake Rocks Mexico.

Mexico City, Dec. 27 (U.P.).—Sharp earth tremors rocked central Mexico as far south as the Isthmus of Tehuantepec today. The tremors were the most severe since the major quake of last Thursday.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

On the President's last fishing trip there was more grumbling about the press and a feeling that "something ought to be done" about it; just what remains darkly uncertain. Scarcely a week passes without similar grumbling at the White House.

• • • •

This will be denied, of course; but Secretary Ickes was on the trip and doubtlessly ruminating the speech he delivered in New York a few days after his return, in which Honest Hal spoke ambiguously of newspapers, censorship and free speech.

• • • •

The President and his aides have plenty of cause for complaint. A few papers and a few writers have been grotesquely unfair to him, or have at least emphasized views diametrically opposite to his. (He is irked, for example, by the most trite criticism of his regime—that its goals are magnificent, but its methods inept.)

• • • •

Also, the press is as human as the White House. It makes mistakes. It guesses wrong occasionally, when it is forced to guess. It glosses over its own mistakes and does not gloss over the mistakes of the White House.

• • • •

But Mr. Ickes spoke of a few "lords of the press" who censor news an opinions, who print what they like and leave out what they like . . . Rather inanely he made it appear that these few "lords of the press" publish all the papers in the country, though he knows the men he has in mind publish only a small fraction of the papers.

• • • •

This hostile censorship is vastly exaggerated in the White House mind. Most Washington news is written by men who are emotionally on the President's side, who cherish a deep admiration and affection for him, and who do not shade news for or against him. What's more, their newspapers usually print everything they write, without change. (Also, most newspapermen, even publishers, are strong for the more abundant life.)

• • • •

What the White House does not understand is that the function of the press is not applause, but criticism. When a government does its job well, that soon ceases to be news, and murder stories crowd Washington headlines off the front pages. When a government is faltering, that is constantly news; or when it is speculating, jockeying, seeking the truth by trial and error.

• • • •

A good example is Dr. Gallup's weekly poll. So long as it showed Mr. Roosevelt's personal popularity riding high despite his legislative reverses, everything was lovely; no complaints. But the first poll which showed that the Republicans might gain a few seats in 1938 elicited a powerful snort from Mr. Charlie Michelson, in his most scornful manner.

• • • •

Now, I happen to be one of many newspapermen who feel that the President's purposes are immaculate and his understanding of the tides of these times superior to that of his critics But doe that stay my blunt dagger when he perpetrates an Irish bull? Well, hardly. And there are many sharper, readier daggers.

• • • •

The White House must not be too suspicious of the motive of others, nor too eager for a tempest of applause at every high note. . . . After all, running a government isn't grand opera, and the newspaper corps isn't a claque in the gallery at the Metropolitan.

• • • •

After all, it was the Senate, and not the press, that defeated the Supreme Court bill, and the Supreme Court, not the press, which outlawed FERA and AAA . . . Though the press would like a little of the credit for the first of the two . . . The entire American press does not identify itself with the asinine blunders of a few papers, foh whose blasts he is doubtless thankful.

It would be most appropriate for Charlie Michelson, Steve Early and Marvin McIntyre, who used to be newspapermen themselves, to iron out some of these kinks, not only at the White House, but also at some of the other Government offices where a little criticism causes too much anguish and resentment.

Maryland State Police Honor Fallen Comrades

Baltimore, Dec. 27 (AP).—The graves of State policemen killed in line of duty were decorated by brother officers Christmas morning, headquarters said today.

Eleven of the department's 13 dead are buried in Maryland. Officers from substations adjacent to the cemeteries visited each grave, decorating it with a wreath which will remain there throughout the week.

Mid-City Civic Unit Sponsors Boy, Girl Clubs

Alley Authority Will Be Asked to Remedy Housing Conditions.

The Mid-City Citizens Association last night voted to appoint a committee to organize Community Center boys' and girls' clubs at Thomson School.

Another committee was appointed to confer with the District Alley Dwelling Authority and to point out to John Ihlder, its head, the necessity of clearing up alleys in the mdi-city section.

The association registered a protest against continuation of Police Court cases after the second offense. Members also declared that persons arrested twice for similar offenses should not be allowed to forfeit bond on the second arrest.

The Fire Department was commended for its work during the Hahn's shoe store blaze several weeks ago. In a resolution of thanks adopted, the association declared that only courageous and intelligent work by firemen kept the blaze from spreading.

The association approved in principle the report made by the Citizens Efficiency Committee and voted to celebrate the coming transfer of the Second Precinct Station from its present site to the present Women's Bureau. The Women's Bureau will be transferred to the old Police Court Building.

Native Group Meets.

The District Society of Natives last night adopted a resolution favoring appointment of a resident of Washington to succeed Leslie C. Garnett as United States Attorney for the District, following recent announcement of Garnett's resignation. The group met at the Washington Club, Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

The society ordered its secretary to write a letter to President Roosevelt asking that a resident of the District be named for the office.

Myrtle E. Cawood, president of the Professional Writers Club, described the campaign being conducted by her organization for preserving the Decatur House on Lafayette Square as a memorial to Commodore Stephen Decatur. Congressional appropriation to take over the house may be asked, she said, provided private groups take no action toward establishing it as a permanent historic memorial.

A program of magic was presented at the meeting by H. S. Coles, member of Washington Assembly No. 32, Society of American Magicians. The entertainment was arranged by Jesse C. Suter, first president of the society.

350 Jobs Added To City's Share Of WPA Boost

Total Increase Raised From 850 to 1,200; All at 'Security' Wages.

District share of the 350,000 WPA jobs created recently because of the recession yesterday was raised from 850 to 1,200 by Frank H. Dryden, regional director.

The 350 increase all will be in the security wage lists. Seventy men will be put to work on the Sixteenth street reservoir project, 100 in the trees and parking department and the remainder will be assigned to highway and sewer work.

Meanwhile, 60 WPA laborers yesterday started grading of the old Sixteenth street reservoir to prepare it for a recreation center and playground. Actual work on the project began just one week after the Fine Arts Commission approved plans for the center and 13 years after the idea first was suggested by former Engineer Commissioner James F. Bell.

According to C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent, of National Capital Parks, a total of 250 men will be assigned to work on the project as construction advances.

The recreation center will incorporate 16 new tennis courts, a field house, baseball diamond, a football and soccer field and areas where football, softball and lacrosse may be played. Tennis courts now on the land will remain for the time being.

The work wil be done as a District WPA project under supervision of the National Capital Parks. At present no funds beyond those to cover grading work are available, Finnan said.

Armat, Inventor Of 'Movies,' to Talk

The inside history of the invention and development of the motion picture projector will be discussed by its inventor, Thomas Armat, over the WABC Columbia network this afternoon from 4:30 to 5.

Armat, born in Fredericksburg, a Washingtonian, was responsible for the projection of the moving picture on the screen, and he will tell how he first conceived the idea, and of his first meeting with Thomas A. Edison, with whom he was long associated.

Harry B. Daniel will interview Armat on the network, and on the same program Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, will talk.

The United States Office of Education will dramatize the first attempt to reproduce motion in photographic form. Musical numbers will be furnished by the United States Marine Band, under the direction of Capt. Taylor Branson.

Health Permit Unit Must Pay Rent or Move

Comptroller-General Denies Social Security Funds to Group.

The permit bureau of the District health department, housed in a privately-owned building at Eighth and I streets northwest, must vacate the site for non-payment of rent, it was disclosed yesterday.

This information came yesterday when Acting Comptroller General R. N. Elliot advised health officials that money for rent for the permit bureau could not be obtained from social security funds of the District.

Maintenance of the bureau, which acts as a clearing house for indigent persons seeking admission to District institutions and privately-owned hospitals, is under the Health Department.

The building used by the permit bureau is rented from a private owner by the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals, a private social agency and member of the Community Chest, according to A. R. Pilkerton, legal counsel of the District auditor's office.

"Up until two years ago, the permit bureau was housed in the basement of the District Building," Pilkerton said. "At that time, however, because of crowded conditions, the Central Auditing Bureau for Hospitals invited the permit bureau to share their building free of charge."

At that time, the permit bureau moved to the building on I street, and until July 1 of this year, when the District health institutions were placed under the Health Department, a demand for rent for the quarters was requested of the Health Department.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland asked the District auditor for advice on obtaining funds from social security sources for payment of this rent.

Last month the auditor's office was advised by the Comptroller General that funds could not be obtained from the social security.

Another request was made of the Comptroller General by the District auditor's office several days ago, this time, however, stating that other States, namely, Maryland, North Carolina and West Virginia, were receiving money from social security funds for payment of rent.

This latter plea was also turned down, Pilkerton said, so now it appears the permit bureau will have to vacate.

It was thought that the agency could be housed in some of the District-owned property in the Municipal Center area.

Quarry Union Quits A.F.L. to Join C.I.O.

By the United Press.

The Committee for Industrial Organization announced last night the Quarry Workers International Union, comprising 8,000 members, had seceded from the American Federation of Labor and had affiliated with the John L. Lewis movement.

The secession came a week after peace negotiations between the rival labor groups collapsed and federation officials said it apparently meant the C. I. O. had resumed "raiding" A. F. L. unions. In addition, federation sources said they believed the move would virtually assure expulsion of some or all of the C. I. O. unions formerly affiliated with the A. F. L., which are now under suspension.

Holdup Men Rob Two Men, Escape

The loot included $5 in a wallet, an overcoat and a watch. Moffett gave police a description of the robbers

Lady Lindsay to Receive Wives of Delegates at British Embassy.

The fiftieth annual meeting of the Geological Society of America will open at the Washington Hotel today with the increase of popular interest in a field of knowledge once followed principally by scientists as one of the features.

Nearly 700 geologists from all parts of the Nation were gathering here yesterday to take part in the affair and put last-minute touches to arrangements for the three-day session, which will last through Thursday.

Officials of the U. S. Geological Survey yesterday attributed the fact that popular interest in the science is at a high peak to the success geologically trained men have had in finding ever-increasing stores of the mineral wealth of the earth for the country's economic advancement, and a constantly growing proficiency in interpreting the history of the earth through strata for millions of years.

200 Wives at Meeting.

The society, headed by Prof. Charles Palache, internationally famed mineralogist of Harvard University, will convene this morning at 9 o'clock.

Accompanying their husbands to the convention will be more than 200 wives of scientists. At 11 o'clock tomorrow morning they will be received by Lady Lindsay at the British Embassy, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day they will be met by Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House.

Prominent Washingtonians who will be present will be Dr. W. C. Mendenhall, director of the Geological Survey; Dr. John Wellington Finch, director of the Bureau of Mines; Dr. L. W. Adams, director of the Geophysical Laboratory of the Carnegie Institution; Dr. R. C. Wells, retiring president of the Geological Society of Washington, and chief chemist of the Geological Survey, and Dr. D. F. Hewett, chief of the metals section of the Geological Survey.

Other Groups to Meet.

Affiliated organizations will meet with the G. S. A. These will include the Mineralogical Society of America, the Paleontological Society of America and the Society of Economic Geologists. More than 150 papers, covering all branches of the science, will be read before the society.

A forum discussion of the needs of geology, to be held in the hotel tomorrow morning, will be one of the high lights of the meeting. A possible program for research in the science will be discussed by Dr. A. L. Day, former director of the Geophysical Laboratory of the Carnegie Institution; Dr. C. K. Keith, of the University of Wisconsin, who served as mineral adviser of the Paris Peace Conference; Dr. N. M. Fenneman, of the University of Cincinnati; Dr. Norman L. Bowen, of the University of Chicago, and president of the Mineralogical Society of America, and Dr. T. W. Vaughan, former president of the Scripps Institute of Oceanography.

This discussion will revolve around a questionnaire sent out to members of the society. In conjunction with the meeting, tours will be conducted through the Geophysical Laboratory and other Government and private research establishments.

'Other Wise Man' for 13th Year Plays to Capacity Audiences

Nearly 1,000 Attend and Scores Turned Away From 'Washington Version' of Play Given at Luther Place Memorial Church.

Nearly 1,000 persons attended the thirteenth annual performance of "The Other Wise Man," which opened last night for the first of four consecutive presentations at Luther Place Memorial Church. Despite the rain, scores were turned away for lack of seating facilities.

Participated in solely by Washington amateur actors, the six-episode play by Dr. Henry Van Dyke is based on the life of Artaban, the fourth wise man who devoted his life to the poor and needy.

Presentation of the play was arranged by Bess Davis Schreiner and given under her personal direction. The special arrangement, known as the "Washington Version," the only version of the original play authorized and approved by Van Dyke and the publishers of the book.

Among those in the cast are Denis E. Connell as Artaban, the Other Wise Man; Katherine Riggs as the Narrator; Wade Robinson, Thomas M. Cahill, J. A. Bishop, J. Edmond Veitch, Eugene Kressin, Clifton P. Clark, Irving L. Koch, Joseph Custer, Nina Norman, Yerby Pannill, Christine Irish, Olga Dryden, Elinor Evans, Frank Stewart, H. R. Allen, Harold Hirsch, William Moore, L. F. Kirkland, Harvey Brake, Leo Weimer, John Gilber McIlwee, Mary Sanders, Ernestine Galbraith, Jane Ellen Mankin, Minervit Brake, Mildred Robinson, Mrs. B. G. McIlwee, Mary S. Stickley and Mrs. Harvey Brake.

"The Sign in the Sky," first scene of the play, takes place in the home of Artaban and depicts his vision of the sign and his decision to follow it. Scene two, occurs at the Temple of the Seven Spheres, where the three wise men have followed the star.

Artaban saves the life of a perishing Hebrew in the third scene, which takes place outside the city walls. In scene four of the drama, Artaban gives one of his three jewels to save the life of a poor child.

Scene five takes place in an obscure house in Egypt, depicting Artaban talking with a Hebrew rabbi and learning of the "Hidden Way of Sorrow." The final scene unfolds 33 years later at the Damascus Gate and shows Artaban saving the life of a Parthian slave by giving his last jewel for the girl's freedom.

Stolen Automobile Recovered by D. C. Officers in 14 Mins.

At 10:24 last night the police radio broadcast a lookout for a stolen car belonging to Leroy B. Iserman, of Teaneck, N. J., who was staying at the Hamilton Hotel.

At 10:38 the radio announced the recovery of the car and arrest of the driver by Sergt. M. R. Gore and Private E. L. Ware in a scout car. The officers heard the broadcast, made a note of the license number and looked up to see the car standing in a line of traffic before them at Ninth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast.

D. C., Cleveland Police Collaborate On 'Lone Bandit'

Police last night were awaiting a photograph and fingerprints of a bandit slain in Cleveland Friday to determine if he is the District's "lone bandit."

Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson said he had wired Cleveland authorities and should receive the information this morning.

The slain man was identified as Thomas Franklin Hogan by naval discharge papers on his person. A local rogue's gallery photograph of a man named Hogan has been partially identified by victims.

Thomson said if the description and picture of the man slain by Cleveland detectives resembles that of the Washington Hogan, he will send a victim and a detective to Cleveland in an effort to identify the body.

"If he is the man," Thompson declared, "it will solve about 20 holdups here during the last six months."

Court Directs F. C. C. To Review Radio Plea

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday sent back to the Federal Communications Commission for further consideration the application of Paul R. Heitmeyer for a broadcasting station in Cheyenne, Wyo.

The application was rejected last spring, although the FCC failed to file a finding of facts. The Appellate Court asserted the action should be returned for such a finding.

Seal Urges Abolition of D. C. Coroner

His Legislative Program Would Substitute Medical Examiner.

Revision of Criminal Code to Clarify Meaning Also Advised.

Tightening of the District criminal code and the abolition of the office of the District Coroner are among legislative measures completed by the corporation counsel's office to be recommended to Congress, it was announced yesterday.

A six-point program, designed by Corporation counsel Elwood H. Seal to improve District laws and recommend amendments will be submitted to the House and Senate District Committees at the regular session.

Six Changes Planned.

There are:

1. A bill which would revise the definition of the term "murder" as now contained in the criminal code, by shifting the word "purposely" from one clause to another, which would bring about more convictions.
2. Replacement of the District Coroner by a medical examiner and do away with the Coroner's jury.
3. A bill to prevent out-of-town public school students from attending District schools without paying tuition.
4. Appointment of a commission to select an official flag for the District.
5. A measure to provide a farm for inebriates.
6. Minor amendments to the inheritance tax law.

Pupils Cost $250,000 a Year.

At the present time there are approximately 3,000 students in the public schools of Washington, who live either in nearby Maryland or Virginia. Of these, only 12 pay tuition. The others, having either one or both of their parents employed by the Government or by private enterprises, are exempt.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, Superintendent of Schools, has stated that it costs the District $250,000 annually to teach the out-of-town students.

It was estimated that the tuition to be charged the out-of-town students, should the measure receive approval by Congress, would range from $61 to $258 a year, depending upon the school attended. Children of both privately employed and Government employed parents would be required to pay tuition.

Need For Ensign Told.

The rewording of the criminal code, Corporation Counsel Seal stated, resulted from the celebrated Garden-T-Shoppe murder case, which occured April 3, 1931, and a conviction against the alleged slayer came about in 1936. Thomas Jordon, the alleged slayer, was sentenced to die, but was saved from the chair by President Roosevelt.

"Wrangling over the terminology of the criminal code, and the length of the case has prompted the amendment," Seal said.

The District of Columbia should have an official flag, just as any State in the Union, Seal explained, and a commmission should be appointed to select an emblem.

A measure, long-awaited, is a farm to care for habitual drunkards, it was explained. A farm, such as is used in other cities, would be a boon in curing the inebriates.

The inheritance tax, which has been the center of much discussion recently by the District Tax Committee and Citizens Advisory Council on Taxes, would be amended in accordance with their recommendations.

Clare Kummer Comedy, Roland Young Starred, Is Fluffy Trifle.

By Nelson B. Bell

"SPRING THAW." Max Gordon presents Roland Young in a new play in three acts and seven scenes by Clare Kummer. Staged by Eddie Sobol; settings by Donald Oenslager. Costumes supervised by Bianca Stroock. Reviewed Monday night, first time on any stage, at the National Theater.

The Cast.

|---|---|
| Willie | Roland Young |
| Edie | Lea Penman |
| Myrtle | Jane Gordon |
| Beekman | J. P. Wilson |
| Joseph Wechstrom | Francis Pierlot |
| Dr. Parkinson | Robert Wallsten |
| Bee | Lillian Emerson |
| Georges LeBord | Edgar Barrier |
| Bernice | Natalia Danesi |
| Mrs. Gersh | Esther Mitchell |
| Luke Beebe | Tom Fadden |

It is a light, fluffy and delightful comedy that Clare Kummer has concocted as a vehicle for one of Roland Young's too-infrequent returns to the boards from the flickery dramas of Shadowland.

Nothing to ponder over, and affording no meaty feast of discussion of those who deem the living theater an arena of deep contemplation and provocative discourse, "Spring Thaw," nevertheless deftly presents a gay treatise upon the topic of a young wife's awakening to the stability of a husband who compensates for a lack of "color" by a fine display of tolerant sense and a subtly humorous appreciation of the more secure guarantees of marital understanding and connubial bliss.

The comedy in three acts and seven scenes, revealed for the first time on any stage in the National Theater last night, possesses the inestimable advantage of a cumulative dramatic and comic effectiveness. Slightly diffused in identification of characters and the import of the play in the introductory passages, it defines itself rather well in its subsequent developments and brings down a final curtain upon a last act that is conspicuously the best of the three.

Perhaps the most obvious asset the fable can boast is to be found in the crisp and pungent lines Miss Kummer has given her principal figures to speak. They are thickly studded with laughs that punctuate the story of a young matron, infatuated with an alien admirer, with a quality of flippant fun that is quote in keeping with the purpose of the work to provide a short evening of agreeable, literate and sprightly observation of married life in one of its threatening, but not fatal, moments.

On Edge of Disaster.

Willie and Bee Granger are on the verge of a domestic crisis. Georges Le Bord is a fascinating young fellow, whose hand-kissing tricks of drawing-room flattery make a deep impression upon Mrs. Granger. After all, Willie is a prosaic sort of chap. After Georges has perpetrated a crassly counterfeit bit of self-destruction, Willie adopts a similarly bogus method of impressing his wife with his own fidelity and adoration. These conventionally ballistic adjuncts to Cupid's quiver of arrows having proved the complete futility of love's fragile armament, Willie packs off to his lodge in the Adirondacks reasonably certain that Mrs. Willie will put in an early appearance, cured of her delusions of an idyllic married life with the accented and punctilious Mons. Le Bord. Willie was a sapient, as well as a prosaic fellow. It all works out precisely to his formula.

The Adirondack Lodge, what with the oil having been drained off so that the heater won't work, and a spring snow storm going on, and all, was pretty cold. This happy circumstance has been utilized by Miss Kummer as the groundwork of a final scene and "tag-line" that salvage her play from whatever charges of misdirection its initial movements may have occasioned. A storm of applause after the fall of the final curtain last evening resulted in an uncounted number of bows by the principals, Mr. Young coming in for the major and barely evading the responsibility of that bane of some actors, a curtain speech. It would have been pleasant if he had made one. Somehow—and not inexplicably—the crowd that filled the theater seemed to expect it.

Roland Young Scores.

Mr. Young's performance is a quiet, repressed and infinitely effective one in the role of the complacent and patient Willie. His opening scenes were keyed too low for the entire edification of those sitting back of the first six rows, but that was an error of underemphasis that was immediately corrected after the fall of the curtain on the first act. Gifted with a fine sense of timing and the adroit delivery of lines that bristle with genial fun, Mr. Young brings further high luster to a reputation that encompasses both fields of dramatic endeavor—the stage and the films. I rank him among the foremost of our contemporary comedians.

The cast with which the star has been surrounded by that sagacious entrepreneur, Max Gordon, reflects that producer's infallible sense of selection. For the role of Bee, he has chosen Lillian Emerson, a youthful Baltimore socialite, who plays her part with disarming naivete and charm. Her portrayal deserves to be bracketed with Mr. Young's on every count of skill, intelligence and a high measure of personal attractiveness. The excellence of the cast, however, does not end there. Jane Gordon, another whose name is new to the roster of the theater's principal players, makes a fine impression in the slightly subordinate role of Myrtle, and Lea Penman lends fine reading and a commanding presence to the part of Edi. Willie's solicitous and largely ubiquitous sister. Edgar Barrier is a suitably glossed Georges in the scenes upon which the comedy depends for its motivation and Robert Wallsted brings a comparable authenticity to the role of Dr. Parkinson. A fine bit is introduced toward the end of the amusing developments by Tom Fadden, who adds to their amusement by the cleverness of his impersonation of the Adirondack caretaker, Luke Beebe. Other minor assignments are accounted for in superlative fashion by Francis Pierlot, Natalia Danes and Esther Mitchell.

Not an item of any particular dramatic importance insofar as the permanent annals of the theater are concerned, "Spring Thaw" still m her relied upon to provide a carefree and innocuous evening in the theater. It will grow better as the "tightening up" process inevitably follows th revelatory experience of a 'first time on any stage."

Katharine Cornell Drops World Tour Until Conditions Abroad Adjust Selves

European Survey Convinces Star Time Is Not Ripe for Projected Two-Year Tour; the Postman Still Busy; 'Hurricane' in New Year's Preview; Gillmore Resigns From Equity; Notes of the Theater.

BELL.

AS WAS timorously divined in this space several weeks ago—and the source of our hunch was that intangible thing known as the "grapevine"—Katharine Cornell, "first lady of the theater," has announced that her tentative world tour in a repertory of plays has been abandoned, at least for the time being.

This decision is communicated to the dramatic department upon Miss Cornell's return from a survey trip to London and the Continent, during which it was brought home strongly to her than this is an inauspicious time to undertake so pretentious a globe-circling junket as she had had in mind.

The tour in four or five plays in repertory—"Romeo and Juliet," "Saint Joan," "Candida," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and a new vehicle—was originally penciled in on the Cornell memorandum pad to begin in March, 1938, with an itinerary that would have led her and her company from San Francisco, through the Orient and around the world. The troubled conditions—and they are a little more than merely troubled—in China and Japan render it virtually impossible for Miss Cornell to act in those countries and have disrupted the usual lines of travel in the Orient and the antipodes.

In Europe, political and economic conditions make it impossible for Miss Cornell to appear in many countries on her proposed itinerary at this time.

Inasmuch as Miss Cornell had set herself the goal of a comprehensive tour that would consume hardly less than two years, she has decided to defer her visits to foreign shores until a time when something at least approaching her first far-flung plans will be feasible.

Meanwhile the gathering of facts and information bearing directly on the world tour idea continues. The far outposts of the world thus still have something to look forward to—but not this year nor next.

These talented young women of the stage and screen who drop by the Capital now and again have a way of making the local drama desks feel something of the warm glow of camaradarie that is supposed to characterize the merry Yuletide season. I have in mind a recent letter from Mitzi Mayfair, but more immediately one from Mary Brian, headlining this week's stage bill at the Earle, which reads in part as follows, under date of December 25 at the Mayflower:

"My dear Mr. Bell: May I thank you for making my Christmas merrier by your grand review of my act at the Earle. I had been dreading my first Christmas alone, but your very kind write-up seemed like a personal Christmas greeting and helped a great deal. I met you here several years ago—if you are by the theater any time, do stop in and let me thank you personally. Many thanks again and a very happy Christmas season. Sincerely,

(Signed) MARY BRIAN."

That is the sort of thing that makes a "drayma editor's" life bearable—especially when he has done nothing but been guilty of a little bit of understatement. Mary is a very grand young person—as you can readily see.

* * * *

So now comes along a considerable list of special New Year's Eve programs in the theaters of the Capital. The Earle, Loew's Capitol, both with stage shows, and practically all of the other houses in town, are going there with extended bills particularly arranged for the edification of the holiday whoopee-seekers.

Perhaps the most enthusiastic of these contributors to the gayety of the liveliest night of the year is old Col. James Jeremiah Lake, manager of the Gayety Theater. The good colonel is popping off not with any mere single extra performance, but has two on his docket—one on New Year's Eve and the other on Saturday night of this week, each to begin a little ahead of the gong sounding the witching hour.

At Loew's Palace, 1938 will be greeted by a special midnight preview of Samuel Goldwyn's production of "The Hurricane," his film version of the exciting South Seas story by the authors of "Mutiny on the Bounty." This will be a "sneak" preview of the picture, which will not be presented as a regular attraction until the current engagement of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Rosalie" has run its course. Having read the book at one nerve-tingling sitting, this column can only repeat that if the picture achieves even a fraction of the suspense engendered by the novel it will be one of the epoch-making films of this or any other season. By all accounts it does slightly better than that. The principal roles are played by Jon Hall, Dorothy Lamour, Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey, Thomas Mitchell and John Carradine. We shall see what we shall see—and that should be plenty. The preview will get under way at 11:55 p. m. The big wind will come only a few minutes later. Hang onto your hats!

* * * *

It is a little in the nature of a surprise that Frank Gillmore should have resigned from the presidency of the Actors' Equity Association on December 7, after something like 20 years' association with the organization that has achieved such a dominant place in the theater under his guidance. The resignation came just four days prior to the completion of nine years of service as president, an office that Mr. Gillmore assumed after the retirement of John Emerson from the post.

It is understood that President Gillmore's action was prompted by his assumption of the executive directorship of the Associated Actors and Artists of America. Failing health also is known to have had a part in reaching the decision that deprives Equity of one of its most valuable servants.

* * * *

From Boston, under date of December 26: "My dear Mr. Bell: Miss Greenwood did a "Veni-Vidi-Vici" thing again in Boston last night and it looks as if the season may go on and on. Here's hoping yours will be a happy and a prosperous New Year. (Signed) WOOD SOANES." This, of course, would refer to Charlotte Greenwood in "Leaning on Letty," one of the season's earlier bookings at the National. It is pleasant to note that Miss Greenwood's resumption of her former singing-self has enlisted such hearty support. It is to be hoped that, like the brook, she will go on forever. But you should see the picture of her on the postcard!

* * * *

There is a well-defined rumor going about to the effect that one of the downtown theaters shortly is to pass under new management. This concerns none of the motion-picture houses and has no relation to the National. To get down to so-called brass tacks, it means the Gayety, hereinabove referred to a few blocks back.

If Col. James J. Lake decides to relinquish his theater holding to devote his entire time and attention to the conduct of his restaurant and night-club interests, control of the Gayety, so one hears, will pass to Philadelphia interests.

I hope not. Jimmy has done a grand job on Ninth street in a much-abused form of theatrical undertaking. It would be nice to know that he is to continue at the helm.

* * * *

That kiddies' day at the Variety Club was a huge success. The youngsters had everything even remotely connected with the spirit of Christmas to make them happy—even down to Archie Engel as Santa Claus and Chaz Chase, from the Earle stage show, to eat all the burning matches in the place and otherwise bewilder them.

* * * *

Gosh-How-I-Hate-It Note.

And there is still New Year's Eve to come!

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

* * * *

* * * *

Hollywood has been indicted on a great many counts, but none, to my way of thinking, is so serious as the fact that it encourages the sacrifice of normal childhood.

* * * *

All Hollywood is watching with interest a "situation" which has developed at Paramount. A few weeks ago that studio signed a vaudeville headliner named Nell Kelly. If you have seen her on the stage you undoubtedly remember her, for she is a comedy riot. She has a mouth as big as Martha Raye's. When she sings—and how she sings!—she twists her face and body into the most grotesque postures. She is the world's champion exponent of pep — a comedienne who has capitalized on her lack of beauty. In other words—another Martha Raye. It is not in the cards for any one studio to want—or need—two comediennes so much alike. And Martha has been quarreling with the studio bosses. Today I saw Martha standing on the sidelines, watching Nell make a test. And there was nothing comic in her expression.

* * * *

A new Goldwyn story today. Seems that Sam was sitting with his hired henchmen in the studio projection room, viewing a rough cut of "The Goldwyn Follies." One sequence roused his ire. "Those scenes are lousy, they are terrible!" he shouted. "We will eliminate them, Mr. Goldwyn," agreed the chief cutter. "Listen," roared Sam, "who is running this studio, you or me? I want those scenes cut out entirely, not eliminated!"

* * * *

John Brown, manager of the world-famous Coconut Grove, argues that the best entree to a motion picture contract and stardom is a job as entertainer in any one of Hollywood's outstanding night clubs, and to support his contention offers a list of no less than 63 former Grove entertainers who have made a name on the screen. The No. 1 example, of course, being Bing Crosby. Brown, a modest man, contends that the skill of the entertainers is not as important in the equation as the mellow mental state of the producers whom they entertain.

* * * *

Speaking of Bing Crosby reminds me that the crooner is a very chastened man today. Between scenes on his new picture, he has been teaching Mary Carlisle to play poker, a game she "didn't understand." To date the effort has cost Mr. Crosby about $160. This morning, visiting on the set, I asked Mary what sort of poker player he is. "Not so good," she twinkled, "but his game is improving."

Chess or No.

Humphrey Bogart and his friend, Broderick Crawford, who is in New York playing "Lennie" in "Of Mice and Men," are playing chess by long-distance telephone. They tell each other of their moves over the phone, making several calls weekly.

How to Study.

The Post's New Yorker By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Dec. 27.

TRAVEL DEPT.: Charlie MacArthur arrived from Europe yesterday, after touring through Greece and Egypt . . . "Egypt?" one of his friends asked. "Why did you ever go to Egypt?" . . . "Well," MacArthur explained, "that was the simplest way for me to get home from Hollywood by Christmas!"

SPORTS DEPT.: Joe Louis' movie, "Spirit of Youth," has been completed and was previewed here yesterday . . . In one scene of this autobiographic film Joe was to say the line "Yes, Ma" . . . He couldn't get it right because, he insisted, that isn't the way he addresses his mother . . . "Okay, then," the director agreed, "let's do it your way" . . . And so, in all the scenes, the heavyweight champion of the world addresses his mother: "Yes—Muhmmy!"

POLITICS: Thomas E. Dewey informed the reporters that he never is to be quoted directly by them. It was suggested, therefore, that for all future stories, Dewey appoint an official spokesman . . . "No," the new Dist. Atty. replied, "that was tried by a greater man than I" . . . "Greater man than you, Mr. Dewey?" the reporter returned. "What a story that is—'Dewey's Slipping!'"

* * * *

RADIO DEPT.: Last Xmas 11-year-old Tommy Kelly and the rest of his family, all living in The Bronx, were on relief. Last summer Tommy, without drama experience, was selected to portray Tom Sawyer in the new Selznick film . . . This Xmas, Tommy will guest-star on the Hollywood Hotel program. He will receive, as his fee, $1,000.

SOCIAL NOTES: H. Duncan Draper, of the Boston Drapers, was at E. Morocco and asked one of the officials: "My name's Draper. You know the Drapers, of course?" . . . "Of course," the blue blood was told, "of course we know the Drapers—Muriel, Ruth and Paul. Which one of these are you?"

* * * *

FINANCE DEPT.: United Artists' vice president arrived from Hollywood yesterday in connection with arrangements for exhibiting the "Goldwyn Follies" in New York. He's accepting bids from three movie houses—the Hollywood, the Rivoli and the Radio City Music Hall. The deal to be set will call for $250,000 guarantee, as against a percentage—which is a world's record for the movie industry. Highest, heretofore, has been $165,000 paid by the Rivoli Theater for Charlie Chaplin's "Modern Times."

* * * *

Mauch Twins Help Stand-In Win Role

Nathan got to be their friend because he was their stand-in on the previous "Penrod" pictures and one of those used in "The Prince and the Pauper." The boys told him it was easy to be an actor, and urged him to try. They also offered to teach him, and, despite his protests, did.

Young Nathan was given a screen test by Director Lewis Seiler. He won by that method one of the most important kid roles under those the stellar twins. Hitherto only one star, Katharine Hepburn, has succeeded in getting a stand-in into pictures.

'Mutts' Recognized.

Lee Sheldon, "animal man" at Warner Bros. studio, says that "mutts" are easier to train than thoroughbreds; dachshunds are the best-mannered of the canine blue-bloods, and that you never can tell about even the best-trained pooches. He supplied dachshunds, St. Bernards, collies, scotties, sheep dogs and pekingese for "Food for Scandal."

New Year's Ball To Aid Ill Girl

Certain Warner Bros. players are planning a "serious" New Year's Eve celebration. Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, Olivia de Havilland, Pat O'Brien, Kay Francis and others will gather in the Miramar ballroom at Santa Monica to see the old year out. There will be plenty of merriment, but the price of their cheer will go for a good cause.

The tickets they are buying for admission to the party will defray the expenses of sending Irene Lloyd, a studio make-up girl, to President Roosevelt's Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia. Miss Lloyd was stricken with infantile paralysis some time ago, and the players, hearing that her only chance of recovery is to go to the foundation, decided on the party as a means of raising the necessary amount for her treatment there.

How He Does It.

Basil Rathbone keeps his appearance lithe and his muscles supple by constant fencing. He became accustomed to practicing long hours with the sword for roles in "Captain Blood," "Romeo and Juliet," "Marco Polo" and "The Adventures of Robin Hood."

ABRAMS GETS UNANIMOUS DECISION OVER MAMAKOS

With Shirley Povich

Whatever the complaints against Joe Louis, they can never accuse him of not being a fighting champion. When he signed up the other day to defend his title against one Nathan Mann, in February at Madison Square Garden, he contracted for his third fight within a year, with his title on the line.

POVICH

It's a refreshing departure from heavyweight custom. A new champion's first words following the traditional "Hello, Momma, I ain't hoited," are always to the effect that he will be a fighting champion. But that old gag is slightly worn in the light of modern heavyweight history.

Jess Willard, after winning the title from Jack Johnson at Havana in 1915, didn't average a title fight a year during the four years he bore the crown until meeting up with Jack Dempsey at Toledo in 1919. And Dempsey was probably the most inactive heavyweight champion in fistic history.

For seven years he held the title and he defended it only eight times. He took on Billy Miske and the late Mike fought a fellow named Elizar Rioux in 1922, beat Firpo and Brennan in 1920, knocked over Georges Carpentier in 1921, Gibbons in 1923 and then put his title in storage for three years until he took on Gene Tunney to his great sorrow at Philadelphia in 1926.

Tunney Rested on Laurels.

Tunney virtually rested on his newly won laurels. He was in the ring only twice as a champion. He was idle for a full year until he met Dempsey again in 1927 and then concluded his reign by naming his own opponent in his valedictory fight—Tom Heeney—stopping him in 12 rounds and retiring from the fistic scene. Incidentally, Tunney was the first heavyweight champ to come into the title on a decision.

Max Schmeling maintained the fight-per-year average during the two seasons he held the title after Jack Sharkey dropped it in his lap with a foul punch. Schmeling risked his crown against the late Young Stribling at Cleveland and then the following year tipped Mickey Walker over in eight rounds before losing the crown to Sharkey on a dubious 15-round decision.

Sharkey's reign, which extended for the best part of two years, was marked, like Schmeling's by only three title defenses. He beat up King Levinsky and Tommy Loughran and then got himself knocked out by Primo Carnera with an invisible punch. Sharkey came up from the canvas dripping wet.

Carnera Fought Three Times

Carnera's two-year stretch found him defending his title three times. He won a decision from Paulino in Rome, won another from Loughran in Miami and then met up with Max Baer. Primo's reign ended suddenly in the twelfth round and Baer promptly announced, as usual, that he would be a fighting champion.

But somehow, Baer didn't get around to defending his title but once before he met up with Jimmy Braddock. And that was a joke four-rounder in which he knocked out King Levinsky. Braddock saved Baer the trouble of being a fighting champion by winning the title from him on points.

If you remember, Braddock, too, said that above all, he would be a fighting champ. But like the others he proved very forgetful. He traipsed round the country boxing his chauffeur in exhibitions and for two years the heavyweight crown was stagnant. Then, eventually, he got into the ring with Louis at Chicago last summer and he was champion no more.

So, when Louis pronto announced that he, too, would be a fighting champion, there was no disposition to believe that the Brown Bomber was earnest about it. But apparently he was. He followed his capture of the title by laying it on the line against Tommy Farr two months later and then he signed to meet Max Schmeling in June. That made two title defenses within a year and now he's gone and contracted to meet Mann in a third.

The Farr bout, of course, did not appear to entail any great risk, and the Mann match next month doesn't either, but that doesn't detract from the fact that Louis, the champion, is not content to rest on his title. His appearances with his title at stake are needling interest in the prize fight industry and for the first time since Hector was in puppyhood a fight champion is actually fighting.

In Louis' case, however, it is rather apparent why he is keeping busy. The dark boy's managers know that they have on their hands a lad who takes on weight speedily and must be active to stay in shape. Any long lapse between fights may be fatal to his crown. Louis has shown a distinct amenability toward flabbiness and ring-rust gathers easily on his large-boned frame.

Not only that, but Louis has often told his handlers that he wants to quit the ring. He now has the wherewithal to retire in ease and comfort and has already stipulated that the Schmeling bout will be his last. Louis as a retired champion represents no income for his handlers and thus it is that they are stepping up production to tilt the take before he walks out on 'em. But if that does happen after the Schmeling fight, Louis can still retire with the knowledge that he was the busiest heavyweight champ of modern times.

Harman Resigns His Position As Quakers' Football Coach

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Dec. 27.—Going the way of many football coaches after a disastrous season, Harvey J. Harman, head coach of the University of Pennsylvania, has sent in his resignation.

His action was officially made known today by President Thomas S. Gates, who said:

"By mutual agreement between Mr. Harvey Harman and the trustees of the university, the announcement is made that Mr. Harman, at his request, has been relieved of his duties as head football coach and granted a leave of absence as assistant professor in the department of physical education.

"The university takes this opportunity to express publicly its appreciation of the loyal and untiring service which Mr. Harman has rendered without interruption or leave during the past seven years.

"Announcement of the coaching arrangements for the next football season will be made shortly by the university."

Harman is driving to the football coaches meeting at New Orleans. Until he arrives there his future plans, if he has any, will not be known.

While it is understood that behind the scenes there had been some dissatisfaction there has been little public criticism of Harman's administration and his quitting came as a surprise.

Harman, who played football under Glenn S. "Pop" Warner at the University of Pittsburgh, came to Pennsylvania in 1931 when President Gates inaugurated what has

Pair Shoots 3 Under Par To Gain Top

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Fla., Dec. 27.—Horton Smith, of Chicago, and Leonard Dodson, 25-year-old pro from Springfield, Mo., shot a pair of 3-under-par 67s today to share a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $4,000 Open Golf tournament.

Eleven golfers bettered par over the straightaway holes of this comparatively easy course in a day featured mainly by the first over par score in nine tournament rounds for Sam Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Snead, winter circuit sensation who won the recent Miami and Nassau opens, carded a 73 as his iron play and putting went sour.

Dick Metz, of Chicago, holder of the course record—a 63—and Bruce Coltart, of Haddonfield, N. J., finished on the leaders' heels with 68's.

Seven Tied for Third.

Smith Goes Erratic.

Out in 32 with three birdies, an eagle and one bogey, Smith played erratic golf coming back for a 35, 1 above par. He scored the eagle on the 479-yard seventh, the only dogleg hole, where he reached the green with two fine woods and canned a 12-foot putt.

Dodson, winner of the Philadelphia and Ohio State Opens this year, played steadier golf. Out in 34 and back in 33, he missed just two greens, collected five birdies and had only two bogey holes. The bogies came on the eighth and fourteenth, where he ruined his chances for a 65 by missing putts of less than 2 feet.

Another 18-hole round will be played tomorrow and 36 holes Wednesday.

Wiffy Cox, Kenwood, and Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase and Indian Creek led the Washington, D. C., contingent with one over par 71's. Each had a one under par out-going score of 35 but went two over coming back with a 36. Leo Walper, unattached, scored 37-39, 76, while Louis Worsham, Barnett's assistant at Chevy Chase and Indian Creek, was 39-38, 77.

Cards of the leaders:

| | Par | | | |
| Out | 435 | 344 | 544 | —36 |

Santa Blocks East's Squad

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Dec. 27.—Coach Andy Kerr described the Eastern football squad as "slightly loggy" after "too much Christmas," as he and Bernie Bierman sent them out for two workouts in preparation for the East-West game here January 1.

Punting, passing and dummy scrimmage were stressed in the afternoon, with the passing duties falling to Halfbacks Cecil Isbell, of Purdue; Dick Riffle, of Albright, and Don Hean, of Northwestern. Regular scrimmage will be held again tomorrow, following which the squad will begin a one-a-day practice routine.

At Palo Alto, the Westerners, under Coaches "Biff" Jones and Orin Hollingbery, scrimmaged for two and one-half hours.

Gould Likes Golden Bears Over 'Bamans

Dizzy Dean Shows He Can 'Take It' as Well as Give It.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Dec. 27.—Football forecasts: California over Alabama, Louisiana State over Santa Clara, Rice over Whizzer White and Colorado (with our fingers crossed), Auburn over Michigan State, Texas Tech over West Virginia, West Virginia.

Metropolitan sports scribes escaped annual epidemic of fallen arches and earache this week, due to shift of National Collegiate A. A. U. convention and coaches' powwow to New Orleans . . . Suggested convention menu: Oysters Rockefeller, Peach Bowl a la Pittsburgh, main course of grid subsidies fricasee, baked Alaska a la Kipke.

There's better than even chance that Harry Kipke, bounced from coaching job by Michigan, may land right side up . . . Pennsylvania, which has been annoyed of late by Kipke's pupils, might consider his availability, now that Harvey Harman is out . . . Penn plays Michigan at Ann Arbor next fall . . . Lou Little, an old Red and Blue, also is also certain to have his name linked with talk of Harman's successor, but the pride of Leominster, Mass., has no desire to leave Columbia.

* * * *

It's all news to those involved if there's chance of Frank Thomas shifting from Alabama to Georgia after 1938 football season, although it's true Georgia is coach-hunting now, and also a fact that Thomas has family connections by marriage at Athens, Ga. . . . It's good bet that big league coaching scouts haven't overlooked one-year job that E. E. (Hook) Mylin did for Lafayette.

* * * *

Texas scribes, accustomed to open-door policy in Southwest Conference, were shocked when Colorado's Bunny Oakes barred them from practice sessions at Fort Worth . . . Flem Hall, of Fort Worth Star Telegram, "needles" us for story from Ray Flaherty, Washington Redskins' coach, suggesting pro coaching polished Sammy Baugh's all around talents . . . Seems to us the polishing, if any, was done by Baugh himself . . . by request for our New Year's dinner: One bowl of razzberries.

* * * *

Dizzy Dean accepted nomination of sports writers as "No. 1 flop of the year," thereby proving the great one can "take it," but he will be glad to know that admirers in Farmington, Minn., resent slap at Cardinal flinger . . . Their advice to scribes: "The National League hasn't any more stars than it needs, so let's not belittle the truly great one" . . .

* * * *

Thing that burned up John L. Sullivan most during legal aftermath to his famous fight with Jake Kilrain at Richburg, Miss., was that Jake was convicted of "assault and battery" . . . That hurt more than $18,000 fine assessed against "Boston strong boy," with costs, and caused him to roar charges of "ignorance and partiality" . . .

Seabiscuit to Run In $100,000 Stake

Los Angeles, Dec. 27 (AP).—Seabiscuit, Charles S. Howard's money-winner, will be a starter in Saturday's New Year Stakes at Santa Anita, Trainer Tom Smith announced today.

The last of the foreign threats for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap arrive today from South America. They are Gandhi II, Plutarco and Sumatra III, all Chilean runners purchased by Lawrence Barker, of Los Angeles. Barker already owns Sahri II, Vespasiano and Decuria.

Don Budge Loafs on Job

By the Associated Press.

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 27.—A storm of criticism broke today around the ears of Don Budge, who lazily permitted Germany's Baron Gottfried von Cramm to beat him, 6—1, 6—3, in an exhibition tennis match.

The sports editor of the Herald wote:

"Budge acted as if he was not interested, was careless, lacked concentration and seemed to treat the match as a joke. But it wasn't a joke to the spectators who paid as much as $7.50 to see the world champion in action."

Preceding the Budge-Von Cramm match, Jack Bromwich, of Australia, who recently defeated the American ace in another exhibition, turned back Heinrich Henkel, of Germany, 6—1, 6—1, 6—4, in the first match of an international series between Australia and Germany.

Rose Bowl Game Idea Is Explained

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 27 (AP).—William Dunkerley, manager of the Tournament of Roses, got in a word or two today in the controversy smouldering among fans unable to buy seats to the Rose Bowl football game.

Said Dunkerly:

"The New Year's Day game was not launched as a tourist attraction. It was launched merely as a method of paying for the parade, which is a tourist attraction that is as free as air.

"The game is a football contest between two college teams. How the colleges dispose of the tickets is for the Pacific Coast Conference to decide."

Civic Pin League Plans Sweepstake

The Civic Club's Bowling League will have its first annual bowling party tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Recreation Bowling Alleys. It is planned to have a sweepstake, on a handicap basis, with suitable refreshments. All members of the Civic Club's league and their ladies are expected to attend. From all teams the best five bowlers of the event will be chosen to form a team to challenge a similar team in other cities, with probably Baltimore the first.

Ohio State Wins.

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 27 (AP).—Ohio State University's cagers downed Creighton University, of Omaha, Nebr., 31 to 17, tonight before 2,874 fans—the Buckeyes' third straight win and Creighton's second loss in four starts.

Long Island Quintet Bows to Gophers, 56-41

Big Ten Co-Champions Score Before 18,000 Fans; Addington, Maki and Spear Help Victors Come From Behind to Win.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 27.—Displaying a hard-driving attack, Minnesota's basketball Gophers, co-champions of the Big Ten, inaugurated their Eastern invasion tonight with a 56-41 victory over Long Island University before a capacity crowd of 18,000 in Madison Square Garden.

Led by little Gordon Addington, the Gophers built up a 34-21 advantage in the first half and added to their margin in the closing session under the stimulus of brilliant shooting on the part of Paul Maki and Gordon Spear.

Each of the trio counted 12 points, Addington and Spear from six field goals apiece and Maki from five field goals and two free throws. Irving Torgoff was the spearhead of Long Island's attack, counting 13 points from five field goals and three free throws.

The Gophers jumped into an early lead only to see the New Yorkers come back and forge to the front midway of the first period. The Big Ten representatives continued their driving tactics and pulled away to a 13-point lead at the half.

Long Island pulled up early in the final session and had reduced the margin to seven points, 37-30, when Addington was charged with his fourth foul. The absence of their little star only seemed to spur the Gophers on to greater efforts for they bombarded the goal from all angles successfully, answering each Long Island score with one of their own.

Reds Bannigan, assistant to Freddie McLeod at Columbia, received the following telegram from Hugh MacKenzie, who is spending the winter within a few yards of the La Gorce Club, near Miami, Fla.

Seeded Net Stars Climb

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Richard J. Bender, of Thomas Jefferson High School, Elizabeth, N. J., seeded No. 1 in the boys division, gained a 6—1, 6—0 victory over James Schnaars, of Hotchkiss School, today as the combined National Junior and Boys Tennis championships opened their six-day stand at the Seventh Regiment Armory.

William Umstaedter, of Milburn (N. J.) High School, boys' champion a year ago and sixth-seeded junior this year, twice had to stave off match point before eliminating Harold Jay Berk, University of North Carolina, 3—6, 6—2, 8—6.

Dean Loses To Straiges In Semifinal

Wins 8-Round Decision; Nedomatsky Beats Joey Spangler.

By Bob Garrison.

Steve Mamakos took a chance last night — and a beating—as George Abrams, a superior, more experienced local product, pounded out a unanimous 8-round decision over him in the feature of the weekly fight show at Turner's Fourteenth and W street Arena.

Shortly after he had stepped into the ring with Abrams, a clever counter-puncher who fought with the experience of 13 previous professional victories to his credit, it was apparent to the 2,000 customers that Mamakos had been overmatched. It was only Steve's seventh pro bout.

It took the Jewish boy but three rounds to draw blood from his well-built foe's face and two more to convert it into a mask of gore. Although Steve, who entered the ring under the guise of "Golden Greek," put up a game fight and took the battle to Abrams all the way, he never landed a telling blow. Only in one round, the sixth, did Mamakos actually hold his own.

Mamakos Takes Spurt.

In the eighth, with Mamakos still plodding forward, Abrams cut loose with a fiery barrage, cornered Steve and had him definitely in trouble when the fight ended.

Until that time Mamakos had shown no sign of physical fatigue or lack of willingness to take the offensive. He tried hard all the way but where he was long on fortitude and physical condition, he was short on skill and experience.

A clever boxer got hold of a jumping jack in the semifinal bout. Joey Straiges, Camden, N. J., was the boxer and Irish Johnny Dean was the jumping jack, as ever.

Dean didn't stop jumping either when the bout was ended. He jumped right out of the ring and headed for the dressing room, not even awaiting the announcement by Jimmy Lake that made the eight-round decision official.

Unanimous Decision.

It was a unanimous decision rendered after Straiges had teased the local boy with a long left, then stepped away as Dean missed, and missed, with his aerial blows. Occasionally when roly-poly Dean did land he packed little power with his chopping strokes.

Ivan Nedomatsky, the former "Terrible Terp" at Maryland University, won another fight last night, but he wasn't so "terrible." He won a unanimous six-round decision from Joey Spangler, Richmond welterweight.

Spangler fought Ivan on even terms through the first two rounds, but in the third the Southern boy took a hard right and he looked sleepy. It was the Nedomatsky right, unleashed for the first time. Spangler covered up, but at the bell couldn't walk a straight line to his corner.

Spangler also landed with telling rights, however, and for a few moments in both the fourth and fifth he had the better of it in the exchange.

It was a real test for Ivan, and although he got a passing grade, he lost favor with a large portion of the gallery, that booed him for rough tactics.

Hoover Beats Mussolini.

Tony Ricco, a tough baby from Camden, N. J., who could take it and did—stayed to win a majority decision from Auggie Kroll, Baltimore, in a 6-round preliminary.

Ricco absorbed staggering rights to the jaw in the early rounds but weathered the storm and in the end was scoring with forceful lefts to the face. His strong finish, coupled with Kroll's refusal to box his way into position, proved the margin of victory.

In the opening event, Tommy Hoover, local lightweight, scored a second-round technical knockout over Young Mussolini of Baltimore. It was set for four rounds. The Italian, aptly described by his first name, was floored in the second round, but saved by the bell.

Referee Charlie Reynolds awarded the bout to Hoover after deciding Il Duce was in no condition to answer the gong for the third.

Old Professor Jack Doyle Gazes Into His Crystal Ball and Here's the Result

By Paul Mickelson.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Dec. 27.—Broadway Jack Doyle donned his fancy Chinese dressing gown today and spun every secret out of his magic crystal ball. Before the 61-year-old betting commissioner had finished he had presented the line-up which the "smart money" will follow down the sports trail of 1938.

No man could be better qualified than Broadway Jack in this seasonal habit of prying the inside from crystal balls. He hasn't been out-foxed in the betting business since the Boston Braves won the pennant back in 1914 with their miracle men—and even then he got out of the way just in time by selling all his bets on the team to the late Arnold Rothstein.

BASEBALL . . . in the American League, the New York Yankees will go postward at 3 to 5, shortest priced favorite in big league history. And they'll walk their beat followed in this order: Detroit or Chicago for second and third, Cleveland, Boston, Washington, Philadelphia and St. Louis. The downtrodden Browns will be 300 to 1. Broadway Jack said the crystal ball wasn't so clear in the National League because Pitcher Van Lingle Mungo hasn't been sold yet. If either the New York Giants or Chicago Cubs get him, they'll win the pennant followed in this order. Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Boston, Brooklyn, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, a 500 to 1 shot. If neither the Cubs nor the Giants get Mungo they'll be equal choices at 3 to 2 in Jack's book.

World champion? Without even looking at the crystal globe, Broadway Jack said the Yankees were "in."

FIGHTS . . . In case you've forgotten, it was the same Mr. Doyle who got everybody along Broadway laughing when he picked Max Schmeling to flatten Joe Louis between the tenth and fifteenth round. But when they were through guffawing, Maxie kayoed Looey in the twelfth. So this time, Mr. Doyle sticks right to his man. He picks Schmeling again—somewhere between the tenth and fifteenth rounds. And while he doesn't like fighters who stray into heavier zones, he picks Henry Armstrong to beat Lou Ambers for the lightweight crown. He also figures Ceferino Garcia will take the welter title away from Barney Ross.

GOLF . . . Though he's been in the commission business 31 years, Broadway Jack still admits utter confusion when it comes to golfers. But under pressure of a cupful of Christmas punch, he foresaw victory for either Sam Snead, Ralph Guldahl, Harry Cooper, Jimmy Thomson or Dick Metz in the national open, a repeat for Johnny Goodman in the national amateur and an upset triumph for Beatrice Barrett, of Minneapolis, in the women's national. (P. S. Jack doesn't know Miss Barrett so well. It wouldn't be much of an upset.)

TENNIS . . . Bobby Riggs and Don Budge will fight it out for tennis laurels after America successfully defends the Davis Cup. Budge will win after a terrific struggle and then turn professional with Riggs to give the pro promoters their greatest field since big Bill Tilden went commercial.

FOOTBALL . . . Even the bowl games didn't escape Mr. Doyle's trained eye. In succession, he picked California, Louisiana State, Rice, Auburn and Texas Tech. He saw victory for the East in the East-West charity game. College campaign? "Simple," he said. "Always take Pittsburgh and never bet against Notre Dame in any one game."

HORSES . . . Winner of the Kentucky Derby will be Fighting Fox. "I like the Fox not only because he is good, but because he didn't run his legs off as a 2-year-old. He ran only five races and was in the dough each time. And he's a full brother of Gallant Fox—enough for me."

As I was about to leave, I thought of a real hard one. "How about the wrestlers?" I asked Doyle.

"Do you want me to do all your work?" he howled. "All the crystal balls and Houdinis in the world couldn't figure that one out. There's nothing super supernatural about me, you know."

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

New York, Dec. 27.—What proof have they that Armstrong is better than Ambers?

They simply cant do it to my little Luigi—My little Luigi D'Ambrosio, who fights under the name of Lou Ambers. Larruping Lou is the world's lightweight champion. I have been boosting his tsock ever since I first saw him tossing leather as a preliminary boy. Luigi or Lou looks upon me as a godfather, or something.

Nat Fleischer, editor of the Ring magazine, sent me the ratings of 1937 as voted upon by the boxing writers and sports editors of the world. Those ratings showed that Henry Armstrong, the coffee-colored Los Angeles knockout artist who is featherweight champion, was elevated also to the position of head man in the lightweight division. I mean the Ring's rankings for 1937 put Henry Armstrong above Lou Ambers in the lightweight division.

* * * *

Nat Fleisher is a very good friend of mine—also a very good friend of Lou Ambers. I know that this unusual rating was not perpetrated through fault of the editor of the Ring magazine. But still I think that rating was wrong—I think that rating was voted by men who didn't realize what they were balloting.

I mean those 393 fellows all over the world who voted in the Ring's annual election failed to consider thoroughly the question upon which they were voting.

I will admit that Armstrong is a great fighter. I saw him knock out Wally Hally in Los Angeles, Petey Sarron in New York—to gain the featherweight crown—and Billy Beauhuld in New York to be recognized as the outstanding lightweight challenger.

But never have I seen Armstrong do anything that would indicate he could beat Lou Ambers, the lightweight king. Since Ambers won the 135-pound crown, he has been the most underrated champion in the lightweight division's history.

* * * *

Only a few months ago, all the boxing writers were warning that Ambers held the toga merely because Pedro Montanez had not tangled with him in a title affair, as yet. They had seen Montanez defeat Ambers in a ten-round nontitle fight at Madison Square Garden, and they were cocksure that when Montanez inveigled Lou into the ring for a 15-round title affair at the Polo Grounds during the carnival of champions, Montanez would give Ambers the beating of his life.

But what happened? Ambers outpointed Montanez with such ease that their bout was a farce, because Montanez held so much and slowed up the action.

I'm not saying that Henry Armstrong cannot beat Lou Ambers. Anything is possible in boxing. Max Schmeling upset the great Joe Louis when few thought he could do it. But I will not admit that Armstrong can beat Lou until I see Homicidal Henry do it.

* * * *

Armstrong may have knocked out 27 of the 28 opponents he fought during 1937, but Armstrong never tangled with anybody like Lou Ambers, who really goes to town only when the chips are down. And let me assure you right now: Nobody in the ring today is knocking out Signor Ambers, of Herkimer, N. Y. I'm quite positive of this because I know that one of the Zivic brothers broke Lou's jaw—but didn't knock him out or stop him—and lost to Lou.

And I saw Jimmy McLarnin, who hit harder pound for pound probably than any man in ring history, belt Lou right on the "kishkish" with every blow in his repertoire—and still couldn't floor him. This Signor Ambers is a very tough fellow.

* * * *

Ambers is just as tough in his class as is Tommy Farr in the heavyweight division. But Ambers has something that Farr hasn't got. Ambers is as fast as lubricated lightning. He is the most elusive target in the ring today. He's no knockout puncher, but he throws enough leather to make any man of his own weight wish that he had stayed home or gone to the movies.

I'm giving you a tip-off right now. If Armstrong still is undefeated when he tangles with Ambers for the lightweight crown in a big outdoor bout this summer, don't put too much money on Armstrong. Because my god-child, Luigi, will beat him sure as shootin'. He'll take Henry with ease.

* * * *

That's why I'm writing this piece in irritation. I like to see fair play, whether it concerns one of my friends or somebody I do not even know. And I don't think it's Hoyle when the Ring magazine comes out with its annual ratings and puts Henry Armstrong above Lou Ambers in the lightweight division. Particularly when Armstrong has given no indications that he can beat Ambers, or when Ambers—who always has done everything asked of him at the weight—never gave indications that he would lose to Armstrong.

I say: Let them fight it out. But until then rate the champion at the top of the heap in the 135-pound division. I'm quite sure he'll still be there, anyway, after they tangle. And besides, I'm little Luigi's god father, and you'd better not start picking on him.

Victor Sets Best Time Of Meeting

Terpsichore Is Second, Two Lengths Back, in Feature.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Dec. 27. Higher Cloud, a 4-year-old gelding t hatwas left at the post in his last two starts at Saratoga in August, ran like a streak of greased ligtning to win the Palm Beach Purse of 6 furlongs here today. It was anothe feature score for Chicago's Mrs. Emil Denemark. Her colorbearer stepped the distance in 1:10 3-5, the fastest time of the meeting for the distance, and clicked by three er ghts under Johnny Longen. The combination paid 3 to 1.

A. R. Gizzo's Terpsichore earned second money by two lengths, while W. J. Bundscho's Great Haste, the short-priced public choice, never could improve over third place, where he finished, far in front of the other four starters.

Higher Cloud, on his good behavior and in top form, darted away from the stall gate as if propelled from a cannon. Racing into a clear advantage, the son of High Cloud-Miss Tony clearly was best, holding the steady goins mare, Terpsichore, at bay all the way home with Johnny Longden sitting snugly on his back. Great Haste raced head and head with Terpsichore for almost half the trip, after which he gave proof that he was soundly beaten. He closed at odds of $1.25 to one dollar in the field of $4,500 top and $4,000 bottom platers.

The Denemark establishment and Jockey Johnny Longden scored doubles by virtue of the one-length victory of Bootmaker in the seventh race. The gelded son of Whichone was a $5.30 favorite. Longden took his mount to the front before reaching the first turn. Bootmaker continued smoothly, but was doing his best to beat Stocks, which was an easy second over Light. Bootmaker was the fifth winning choice of the day.

Rebekah Wins.

Hose was in a fractious mood. The colt threw Jockey Porter Roberts leaving the paddock for the track. Roberts suffered cuts about the mouth and was treated at the track hospital. Apprentice A. Lo Turco, who substituted f Roberts, also was tossed in the post parade, but he was not hurt.

Displaying a brand of speed that left dust in the faces f her rivals, the 4-year-old filly Rebekah, dropped down into a softer spot than usual, won the 6-furlong initial event. Sprinting into a wide early lead, the Lee O. Cotner filly was ridden out through the short stretch and held a length margin over Miss Chicro, the one to offer chief opposition all the way. Prime the favorite, broke on top but dropped back and had to be content with the show position, another two lengths away. The winner finished in 1:1 flat and returned $10.40.

After 16 failures, Rich Cream, carrying the New York silks of Mrs. W. Plunkett Stewart, graduated from the maiden ranks in the second race. A capacity field of juvenile nonwinners faced Starter Wingfield. Jimmy Stout broke the daughter of Mahman a second position, then faded back to the middl of the pack However, Rich Cream, freshened up since Bowie, had the speed to improve her position steadily after leaving the far side, and she wore down the long-priced Flying Ark to win by a length, paying the talent $6.50. Weary Flower lost the place by two lengths.

Stout Wins Again.

Jimmy Stout chalked up his second straight triumph aboard the 9-year-old plater Stone Martin in the third. Favorite at $7.20 for $2, old Stone Martin ran down the speedy Noble Spirit in the last furlong and proved an easy victor, a length and a half in the clear. Noble Spirit was much the best of the others. He wound up four lengths in advance of the sluggish starting Berry Patch.

The well liked Tilaana, formerly in the charge of Hirsch Jacobs, outfooted a band of youngsters in the six furlong fourth contest. Racing in the Cosgrave Stable silks, the nimble-footed lassie shot into command shortly after a good start and, well handled by Apprentice Mora, stood off the game challenges of Feedman and Join Us. The latter two finished in a photo duel for the place, Feedman catching the nod by a nose. Tilaana paid $9.20.

Hilton (Rabbit) Dabson booted Sugaboot to a hollow victory in the mile and a sixteenth of the sixth race, for 3-year-old claiming campaigners. The mildly backed Halle followed the favorite home, five lengths behind and a half length better than Miney.

At The Post . . . .

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

Clocker Mike's "mysterious squint" worked wonders today in the first two races. Mike said before the program got under way that he thought he could "put the winning spell" on some horses for the Benningites. In the first race he focused the squint on RebeRah and we chalked up a winner. Mike operated from the pressbox this time, but for the second race he moved down on the rail. He squinted Rich Cream and that one also turned in a win, giving us the daily-double. However, Mike announced after the race that it was only with the greatest effort that he was able to "hex" Rich Cream. In the third race, Mike failed and announced that he was through for the day. Squinting was making him weak. I gave him a buck for lunch and he came back and tried to squint me out of a half buck, saying that he hadn't had any dessert. I told him to try to squint himself into a $2 bet on my good thing in the sixth race and he squinted right back at me and I promptly chalked up another loser. If this keeps up he's going to have to go squinting for another job, regardless of his popularity in Cumberland, Hagerstown and Martinsburg.

BILL.

First race—Many Moons appears to be nicely placed in the day's opener and may allow us to start the day with a winner. The top one should get some keen contention from Free Again. The show award probably will go to Gold Buckle.

Second race—Feng has worked well and deserves the call in company of this sort. Needs only the right handling. I'm going to place Gentleman Jack second and Happy Code third.

Third race—Top Tax shapes up as a fair wager in this field. Likes the route and needs only a share of the racing luck. The place money should go to Mondorf. Black River for the show end.

Fourth race—Muddler appears to have a slight edge in this rather open event. This one is consistent and dangerous. The top one will Findon to beat. Akehurst has some speed and may be third.

Fifth race—Bulwark has a good move in Clocker Mike's workout book and needs only to run back to that trial. Lynx Eye and Spanish Babe to chase the top one to the imaginary wire.

Sixth race—Proph should go well in this field and I'm going to string along for the first money. Honey Cloud runs good races on occasions and is a threat. Superwick for the show.

Seventh race—Baby Way has beaten the likes of these and promises to do a lot of running. Veiled Lady is a close fit with the first-named and should be close. Bushmaster to take care of the others.

Coaches Set For Annual Grid Confab

1,500 Collegiate Athletic Moguls Expected to Attend Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Dec. 27.—Incoming trains to this Southern metropolis brought to the city today the vanguard of delegates to the annual convention of the American Football Coaches Association and the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

By Tuesday night, when the N. C. A. A. sessions get under way with a banquet, and Wednesday morning when the Nation's football coaches swing into a round of discussions, some 1,500 visiting college athletics moguls were expected to be on hond.

The annual law-making session of the national football rules committee will follow the week of discussions and the climax of the Sugar Bowl program—the New Year's Day game between Santa Clara and Louisiana State.

Rules Question Up.

Sessions proper of the two national athletic bodies get going on Wednesday. Right off the bat the coaches, with Harry Kipke, recently released at the University of Michigan, in the chair, will go into a huddle on the rules question.

In addition to emphasizing their stand on rules, the coaches' program indicates that no little time will be devoted to the question of motion pictures and officiating. Some coaches, including Bernie Moore, of Louisiana State, have suggested that officiating would be improved if officials were required to go over pictures of games they worked and study "errors."

Lou Little, of Columbia University, is chairman of the coaches' rules committee and will lead the discussions. Little expressed surprise that his colleagues indicated they were in favor of side-stepping any radical rule changes.

Goal Posts Appear Satisfactory.

Little said a majority of coaches, however, desired legislation preventing intentional out-of-bounds kick-offs, which prevent run-backs, and the movement of the ball 15 yards in from the sidelines instead of 10 as at present. There is no demand for replacing the goal posts back of the goal line.

There is a divergence of opinion on the question of permitting forward passing from anywhere behind the line of scrimmage, which is legal in professional ranks and limited to 5 yards back in collegiate rules. The proposal to require the defense to keep a definite number of men on the line of scrimmage has little support.

While the coaches will air their views in convention, the actual designing of the laws committee will open its strictly private sessions on January 2.

Bill Ackerman.

Our duck shooting is out—for another ten months at least. Out far too soon, for most of us, but then that is the way with the good things in life.

ACKERMAN.

We can now pass on to the "hot stove committee" the question that continues to persist in the minds of many—whether or not we did have better duck shooting this year?

Who knows but what arguments, pro and con, or some postseason get-together of local hunters with a far better chance of comparing notes than was possible during the open season, will prove to those who are still skeptical:

That we did have better shooting and that wildfowling is definitely on the upgrade again.

That with good conditions prevailing on the great Canadian nesting areas during the spring and summer months, the increase next year will be in such numbers that the black clouds of birds reported this year from a few sections, will be a reality in every section of the country.

That, because there will be no crying need for them, the more drastic of the present regulations can be modified or lifted altogether.

Postseason tabulation on the deer kill shows that all Eastern States, almost without exception, had as good or better hunting than they have enjoyed for many years past.

Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania all shot above par. New Jersey, for all of its dense population and the great amount of open country and farming areas, killed more in proportion (shorter season this year) than in the record season of 1936.

Even Massachusetts, every bit as open as New Jersey with the possible exception of a few of the western counties, reports a kill of 2,536 deer, 1,349 of which were bucks, the balance of 1,187 being does.

The largest kill on record since the original open season of 1910, exceeded only by the kill in 1929, when four western counties were open for two consecutive weeks (just twice the present season of six days) and the kill was 2,753.

Here is a thought for you deer hunters to keep in mind—in Berkshire County alone there were 914 deer bagged, an increase that is noteworthy because in the same county last season there were shot only 560.

Public officials and others, interested in every form of outdoor activity, from Maryland, the District and a number of other States will gather at a special luncheon on January 5 at the Lord Baltimore Hotel to make final arrangements for the North American Sports Show to be held in Baltimore during February.

Five Governors and Commissioner Melvin Hazen head the list of distinguished guests invited to address the more than 500 expected to attend the luncheon. Gov. Harry Nice of Maryland; George H. Earle, Governor of Pennsylvania; Gov. Homer H. Holt of West Virginia, Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia, Gov. Richard C. McMullen of Delaware, Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, as well as Frederick C. Walcott, president of the American Wildlife Institute, and our old friend J. N. (Ding) Darling, president of the General Wildlife Federation.

Magnificent exhibits valued at more than $1,000,000 will be entered in the show by organizations. Government agencies and commercial exhibitors. All available space in the great Fifth Regiment Armory will be utilized to present a vast panorama of outdoor life, set against naturalistic backgrounds.

According to H. Lee Hoffman, president of the Maryland Outdoor Life Federation, sponsors, the North American Sports, Garden and Outdoor Life Show will not only present a thrilling spectacle, but it is also being planned to be a sugar-coated lesson in conservation.

"Conservation," says Hoffman, "has been too much a matter of conversation among the mass of people, who have left its working principals to a few public officials. The average person is inclined to view conservation problems quite impersonally. He reads in the papers that our natural resources have been seriously depleted, but thinks no more of it. Here, in a dramatic and forceful manner, will be displayed a real lesson relating to every phase of conservation."

Quail shooting will be over for this year on Friday in Maryland, and the day also ends the hunting of this delectable upland bird in the Virginia counties west of the Blue Ridge.

East of the Blue Ridge, quail may be hunted until January 24, with these exceptions. In Accomac, Bedford and Northampton Counties the season closes on January 15, while Culpeper, Fairfax, Farquier, Loudoun and Rappahannock Counties close on the last day of this month.

Bears Given Snappy Drill On Arrival

Hundreds Cheer Coast's Bowl Representatives at Pasadena.

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 27.—California's Golden Bears moved into Pasadena today, nearing the climax of a gridiron victory parade that started last fall and moved with clock-like precision to the Rose Bowl.

Hundreds cheered the blue and gold of the Berkeley lads as they tumbled off the train. The crowd wasn't any happier than the players, though. They've been wanting to get off that train for three months.

Flag bearers of Far Western football, but with triumphant memories of the regular 1937 season pushed aside for the moment, the Bears presented a combination of high glee and deep seriousness as they looked forward to the Alabama game New Year's Day.

The roars of welcome—echoes of their conquests over Stanford, St. Mary's, Southern California, U. C. L. A. and the rest of their recent foes—trailed behind as the Bears were hustled first to their hotel and then to their first practice on the Rose Bowl front.

Head Coach Leonard (Stub) Allison ordered a snappy workout and got it. The session was supposed to be a private affair, but scores sifted into the playing field at Brookside Park, just south of the Rose Bowl.

On another practice field Coach Frank Thomas, Alabama's squatty little head man, sent the Tide through a stiff drill. Gates were barred here, too, as Thomas continued to mold a fast charging defense against the rush of the Golden Bears.

Reports from both camps said the squads were in good condition. The Bears' great All-America back, Sam Chapman, who cut his hand at Berkeley, has virtually overcome the handicap, and Capt. Leroy Monsky, Alabama's all-America guard and captain, has refused to let a taped eyebrow, cut in practice last week, hinder his efforts.

John Sullivan Booked Here

That gargantuan Irishman with the elongated beard, John Sullivan, will return to Turner's Arena Thursday night.

Sullivan, who did the unusual by winning two wrestling matches in one night about two weeks ago at the Arena, has been booked for a one-fall-to-a-finish match with Billy Hanson, the crafty Salt Lake City master of the sliding armlock.

There are two other one-fall-to-a-finish matches. Steve (Crusher) Casey, the Kerry County ace, faces Abe (King Kong) Kashey, of Syria, and Jesse James, the handsome Greek boy who claims the world light-heavyweight title, tangles with Paddy Mack, another Irishman.

Thrills Mark Opening Of Court Tournament

The annual Metropolitan Police basketball tournament got under way with a full slate of games and every description of basketball, ranging from the Georgetown Boys Club's 85-pound team's 63-to- 8triumph over the Washington Boys Club Falcons, to the Fleetwings' thrilling extra-period 37-to-34 triumph over Stewart Brothers' Pharmacy.

Action started at 10 a. m. and continued throughout the day and far into the night, with fresh teams taking over the George Washington University gym court as fast as games ended. The tournament has attracted an unusually heavy entry list, and will continue throughout the week when champions in a half-dozen classes will be crowned.

McCallister Resigns at S. Carolina

Rex Enright Appointed Gamecock Grid Mentor.

By the Associated Press.

Columbia, S. C., Dec. 27.—The resignation of Head Coach Don C. McAllister, of the University of South Carolina, and the selection of Rex Enright, former backfield coach at North Carolina and Georgia universities, as his successor was announced tonight by President J. Rion McKisskick.

"The committee on student affairs of the board of trustees of the University of South Carolina accepted the resignation of Don C. McCallister as head coach and upon the recommendation of the athletic advisory board employed Mr. Rex Enright as his successor, the selection of assistant coaches to be left to Mr. Enright, the number of assistants to be selected and their compensation to depend on the financial aid that the athletic association is to receive from the interested supporters of the university.

"The several members of the committee on student affairs announce their intention of attending the meeting of the junior alumni association in Columbia on Tuesday evening, at which time matters of importance would be brought to the attention of that organization by the members of the committee on sudent affairs.

"The committee went on record as thanking Don C. McCallister for his untiring and loyal efforts while connected with the university."

Sports Postscripts

THE release of HARVEY HARMON as football coach at Pennsylvania should come as no surprise to readers of this column . . . Because it was mid-August, more than a month before the 1937 season opened that HARMON'S dismissal was announced by Postscripts . . . And if the rest of the prophecy proves true, the appointment of LOU LITTLE, presently at Columbia and formerly of Georgetown, will be forthcoming, shortly, as HARMON'S successor . . . IT should be hard for LITTLE to leave New York, a coach's haven, but for the amount that Penn will offer him, he's going to almost be forced to make the change . . . GEORGETOWN may have had a little to do with HARMON'S release, too . . . Remember it was the mix-up on the attempted field goal in the closing minute that caused unfavorable comment about HARMON for poor judgment in substiting a player while his men were taking position for a place-kick . . . The kicker made good in his try, but the referee ruled it invalid as Penn had 12 men on the field . . . When the game ended a few minutes later, a scoreless tie, HARMON'S stock tumbled like a prairie weed . . .

* * * *

The feud that preceded the GEORGIE ABRAMS - STEVE MAMAKOS battle last night was an unintentional product of misstatement . . . It seems SYD FISHEL, manager of ABRAMS, took offense at a boast made through this column by MATT TWOMEY, who manages MAMAKOS, that his charge had defeated ABRAMS in the amateur ranks . . . Either TWOMEY said it or this column thought he did . . . However, it was a mistake because he won on a forfeit when ABRAMS was taken ill before the bout . . . And that one little statement was enough to start the fireworks . . . It helped the gate last night, but we're not charging JOE TURNER anything for the publicity . . . BOBBY BROWNELL, former District amateur champion, is home from uke University for the holidays and is mincing no words when he mentions the Blue Devils' golf team . . . HE swears it will be the best in the South, maybe the country . . .

* * * *

Many a coach has wanted to do what Coach BILL WOODWARD has finally decided upon . . . He's going to don a uniform and play with the team . . . A law student at the Y. M. C. A. school, Woodward has done a swell job with his material, but says he can't stand (or sit) to watch his cagemen suffer from lack of reserves.

BOB GARRISON.

Chile Leads Foreign Nations in Canal Trade

New York, Dec. 27.—According to official Panama Canal figures made public today, Chile shipped a greater volume of goods through the Canal in the fiscal year ended June 30, than any other foreign country. Total tonnage from Chile amounted to 3,535,000 tons, as compared with a total of 3,160,026 from Canada, its nearest competitor.

Among specific commodities in the Canal traffic, Chilean nitrate ranked seventh accounting for 1,329,000 tons, or more than one-third of all produce coming from Chile. On this tonnage Chilean nitrate paid tolls amounting to approximately $1,150,000, or 5 per cent of the total Panama Canal revenue of slightly over $23,000,000 received from all tolls in that period.

Corn Futures Jump 2½ Cents With Exports

Advance Follows Abrupt Rise in Deliveries at Buenos Aires.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 27.—Brisk export purchasing power of United States corn, with Buenos Aires corn prices shooting skyward 5 cents a bushel, made corn the grain trade leader today.

Chicago corn values soared 2½ cents maximum to the highest point reached in several months, but were far outdone by quotations at Buenos Aires, where January and February corn went to nearly 20 cents over the December delivery here. Estimates current indicated that considerably more than 1,000,000 bushels of corn from Atlantic and Gulf ports of the United States were bought today for shipment to Antwerp and Rotterdam.

At the close, Chicago corn futures were 1 cent to 2¼ cents above Friday's finish, December 61⅛, May 61¾@61⅞, July 61@61⅛; wheat ¼@½ up, May 92½@92⅝, July 86½; oats ⅛@⅞ advanced; rye showing ¼@⅝ gain, and provisions down 10 to 15 cents.

Stocks Decline in Late Selling Rush; U. S. Bonds and Wheat Hold Firm.

New York, Dec. 27.—United States bonds were firm and commodities were steady, but stocks had a decidedly poor day. While the passing of the latest Japanese crisis helped somewhat the market for Japanese issues, the affair was passed over by the share market. Attention there was concentrated on the new outburst against business by Government spokesmen, and by industrial news indicating a further decline in activity. All that was too much for a market which for the last several days has been weakened by the extensive tax loss selling, the sales for the provision of holiday cash and the contraction of year-end accounts. Prices were near the worst at the close, with leaders off 1 to 3 points, on a turnover of around 1,250,000 shares. May wheat closed ⅜ of a cent higher at 92⅝ cents a bushel.

Stocks were draggy from the start, but trading in the first half hour or so was dull rather than frightened and prices sagged only moderately. Weakness begat weakness until during the lunch hour, when the American Iron and Steel Industry's estimate of the steel industry's operating rate was published, showing a decline for this week to around 19 per cent of capacity, or but little above the worst of the 1932 depression. That seemed to touch off fresh selling, and on increased volume prices melted 1 to 2 points under their previous levels which, for leading issues, already had fallen about that much under Friday's closing.

United States Steel common dropped a point at the opening and never recovered its buoyancy. It sold off 2 points and Bethlehem declined 4 points. Losses of 2 points were the rule by early afternoon in a group including Smelters, Case, Howe Sound, General Refractories, Climax Molybdenum, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak and Air Reduction. The list of 1-point losses was a lengthy one. Wright Aero was down half a dozen scores. A number of preferred stocks fell rather heavily.

Railroads Discouraged.

Railroad shares seemed to be no better nor worse than industrials. Santa Fe gave up 3 points early in the trading, as did Union Pacific. Central's decline was smaller. The net operating income figures for railroads in November were not encouraging. The first 59 roads to report show a fall of 53.2 per cent in net compared with a year ago, and they are down 8.5 per cent for the first 11 months.

Airplane issues, recently the subject of bullish hopes on rearmament, tumbled 1 to 2 points, probably as much in sympathy with the general market as because of any easing of the strain in China. Chemicals declined sharply. Only here and there was it possible to find a stock able to resist the selling pressure, although shortly before the close the tide slackened.

Until Congress has convened in regular session next week and has received the President's message on the budget, which ought to give a general idea of what sort of tax legislation to expect, and also until the President further addresses the Congress on other policies, mainly with respect to labor legislation, it will not be possible to outline the precise nature of the major problems which will have to be solved next year. It is recognized that if he yields ground in his drive for social reform and business regimentation (even though later he returns to the charge), a fresh recovery in industry could begin without much delay. If the President persists in doing what he continues to talk of doing, the mere fear of a long and deep depression will help to bring one about.

Relief in One Direction.

By a refusal to pass the bill for which it was called into extra session, Congress has given the labor position a more realistic appearance. Strikes aren't going to be overly popular at a time when employment is falling, according to the Government's own figures, at the rate of half a million a month (in factories alone), nor will the proposal to fix limit on hours of 40 a week look so enticing even to labor as it once did. Operating a business under the Wagner act seems to be difficult enough, without anything remotely resembling the Black-Connery wage-hour measure to contend with. The winter of business recession will at least be relieved of what last summer threatened to be a formidable obstacle.

Taken at face value, the hints given in the radio address made last night by the Assistant Attorney General (one who is said to have been among the few taken on the last Presidential fishing trip) do not promise anything to grow cheerful about. The address, which was the subject of most of the conversation in Wall Street today, may have been nothing more than another of those numerous attempts by Administration officials to place the blame for the Roosevelt depression upon businessmen. It may be that the proper interpretation is that, forced to retreat from his position of attack on business by the slump, the Administration is merely fighting a rear-guard action.

Steel Output Falls To Three-Year Low

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined 4.3 points to 19.2 per cent of capacity, compared with 23.5 per cent last week, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations averaged 29.6 per cent of capacity, while a year ago the rate was 77.4 per cent. The indicated drop in production for the current week marked the fifteenth consecutive weekly decline and carried the average rate to the lowest since the week of September 4, 1934.

New Building Rise Smallest In Four Years

Rents Drop in November After Unbroken Advance Since 1934.

New York, Dec. 27.—Starting in 1928, the contraction in annual building permit values grew tighter each year until 1933, when the total was 90.8 per cent smaller than that for 1927. While the slow advance in 1934 was quickened in 1935, it was not until 1936 that an expansion in building work started, following its precipitous five-year slide. The 1936 volume was triple that of 1933, double that of 1934, and 64.3 per cent larger than the 1935 aggregate. For the first quarter of 1937, the fourth year of the uptrend by 49.2 per cent from the 1936 period.

In April a downtrend started, which by June had carried the compilation under the previous year's comparative for the first time in two and one-half years. This cut the 1937 six-month gain over 1936 to 26.4 per cent. By the end of November, the increase in building permit values over the 1936 eleven months had been reduced to 12.8 per cent. The number of dwelling units constructed during the first ten months of 1937 was reported by the Department of Labor as only 8 per cent more than in the 1936 period, as against 40 per cent in the six-month comparison.

Vacancy decreases, in the meantime, spread from around 8 per cent of the total number of dwelling units at the end of 1932, vacancies in many large cities were cut to as low as 3 and 1 per cent this year. The residential rent index dropped in November, after an unbroken monthly rise since January, 1934. At mid-December, prices of building materials were down about 4 per cent from the year's high in May. These were some of the major developments revealed by a survey of the building industry, which has just been completed by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Park Projects Up for Study in Prince Georges

Development of park lands, covering more than 1,000 acres along the northwest and northeast branches of the Anacostia River, will be considered by the Prince Georges Chamber of Commerce at its meeting in College Park next Monday as a panacea for the recurring floods at Bladensburg, Md.

Thomas S. Settle, secretary and legal counsel to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, has been invited to attend the meeting as the principal speaker, it was announced by C. D. Anderson, secretary of the chamber.

Provisions already have been made, according to Anderson, whereby Prince Georges County may obtain $750,000 from the Federal Government under the Capper-Crampton Act for development of parks. The sum of $250,000 would be an outright grant, Anderson said, and the $500,000 balance would be loaned on an eight-year non-interest bearing basis.

The only step the county must take in order to secure these funds, Anderson said, is to increase its Park and Planning Commission tax from three to ten cents on each $100 of assessed property evaluation.

"Prince Georges County is just about seven years behind schedule on park development," Anderson said. "If this project had been started when it should have been, the land could have been purchased for less than half of what it will cost now, and we could have had the advantage of the Civilian Conservation Corps workers to develop it."

Fire early yesterday destroyed a tourist home at Berwyn, Md., on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard and forced the owner, C. L. Boyle, to jump through a window to escape the flames. Boyle was treated by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad for cuts and bruises.

The fire was discovered by Mr. and Mrs. Boyle's 13-year-old daughter, who ran to a nearby store to turn in the alarm. Seven volunteer companies responded, but were unable to save the building. Loss was estimated at $5,000.

Idle Insurance For Maryland Is Broadened

45,000 Will Be Eligible in Program Effective Jan. 1.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Dec. 27.—Effective January 1, Maryland's unemployment insurance plan will be broadened to cover 45,000 additional workers not now protected under the law.

The additions are authorized by supplemental legislation enacted during the 1937 session of the General Assembly, expanding Federal unemployment insurance protection. The Federal act covers establishments with eight or more workers; the State amendment specifies four or more.

Stephen Cromwell, executive secretary of the State Unemployment Compensation Board, said today the broadened coverage probably would present difficulties when it becomes effective. Employers not now affected under the Federal act will be unfamiliar with the complicated law and its taxes, he explained.

Tax Cut Group Backs O'Conor In Montgomery

Three Candidates Indorse State Attorney General for Governor.

The three candidates for office on Montgomery County's tax reduction committee ticket will support Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor for Governor of Maryland in the Democratic primary next September, it was announced yesterday.

Candidates of the new political group, whose platform calls for "clean politics" and "general tax reduction," are Sumner Wood, for State senator; Dulaney Hunter, for House of Delegates, and Stephen Fuller, for the board of county commissioners. In announcing their indorsement of O'Conor, they issued the following statement:

"We have, as individual tax conscious citizens, decided to support Mr. O'Conor because we feel that his four years of experience as attorney general, many years' experience as State's attorney for the city of Baltimore, as well as his reputation for honesty in public and private life, recommend him. He stands for a "breathing spell" for the taxpayer, elimination of politics from the State's magistrate system and tightening of the State budget law by constitutional amendment."

Pinch-Hitting for Bogey Man

Looks like a hangover from ancient custom and so it is. Masks are worn in Vienna during holidays to scare away evil spirits. This one attracted a good spirit. The masks were exhibited in museums of the Austrian capital. It would be a rather terrifying spectacle to come face to face with such a mask-wearer at a late night hour.

After-Christmas Packages:

On Christmas Eve this column penned lines to Santa Claus, requesting sundry Christmas gifts for Federal employes. And had we seen the petition of Toni Eyle, as appearing in the current issue of the In-Com-Co, ICC employe publication, it would have been included. The petition read:

"Sirs: The people speak! Give us the five-day week! For our pleasure we ask this leisure; give undue pressure to pass this measure . . . Sincerely do the workers seek, a riddance of the six-day week; so much to do, so much to learn, these poor four hours, we've surely earned . . . For too much work and little play, dries the soul to harder clay; in closing, sir, the people speak—grant us now the five-day week."

Which is committed to the tender hands of Santa Claus, if he gives ear to after-Christmas petitions, and to the more realistic considerations of the Congress . . .

When things go bad for you, the French, in their more classical expression, would say you are having "a bad fifteen minutes" . . . We take the liberty of saying that Postmaster General Farley, in the reverse of things, had a lovely hour in reflecting on a report that held political implication of the first water for him . . . The Postmaster General has long held that postal receipts indicate the economic times . . . and good times—you've guessed it—are a pat on the back and a kiss on the cheek for the Administration . . . So it must have been an hour of glee when some Federal employe or another placed on his desk a notation showing:

Postal revenues for the first 22 days of December were approximately 4 per cent higher than for the same period a year ago, which representer the previous all-time high for Christmas mail business, both in revenue and volume . . . Aside from this, the year's Christmas mail volume was by far the greatest in the history of the postal service in the matter of pieces handled . . . And for an interesting sidelight: December 21 was the largest single business day in postal history, from the standpoint of receipts and volume.

Since Aubrey Williams, WPA acting administrator, agreed to commit to arbitration the now loud case of Bernard Greenberg, let out for alleged union activities, Jacob Baker, U. F. W. A. president, gives some views on the attitude of his organization, which went to bat for Greenberg:

"The method of arbitration agreed to by Mr. Williams is one that the locals in the U. F. W. A. have devised to adjust the sort of disagreement that now exists in the WPA. In the past this method of arbitration has operated to the satisfaction of all concerned. It is unfortunate, however, that arbitration must follow a rather bitter disagreement. It seems to me that every Government employe should have the right to submit grievances similar to these to arbitration without first having to undergo the unpleasantness that usually accompanies a publicized grievance. For this reason the U. F. W. A. supports the Federal workers' appeals act introduced in Congress by Representative Bigelow (Ohio), providing for arbitration similar to that agreed to by the WPA acting administrator.

Scanning the last-of-the-year pile-up of clippings, notes, etc., soon to be waste-basketed (so that a new accumulation may begin) there emerged the face of Dr. Harcourt A. Morgan, vice chairman, TVA, who recently got the award for distinguished service to agriculture—which went to President Roosevelt in 1935, to Secretary Wallace and Senator George Norris in 1936 . . . And also, near the bottom of the heap, was a biography of Dr. Morgan, interesting in all of its vast extent of career, a career that began on August 31, 1867, when Dr. Morgan was born near the small town of Strathroy, "in the fertile southeastern corner of Ontario, Canada" . . . The long career sums up something like this: Helped on the farm; enjoyed rural living; was graduated from the Ontario Agricultural College; found a special work and interest in entomology; soon excursioned to the cattle tick and boll weevil country of the Southern United States; was entomologist and horticulturist at Louisiana State University . . . He fought the cattle tick and followed the migrations of the boll weevil, and his early studies laid the foundation for a successful war against the pests; continued, all the while, his studies; was director of Gulf Biological Station, engaged in other works too numerous to mention . . . But a milestone was in 1919, when he became president, University of Tennessee; honorary degrees began coming in, his activities began expanding until 1933 he left the university on a year's leave of absence to become a director of the TVA; a year later, he resigned from the university to begin a six-year term on the TVA board of directors.

Notes: In Veterans' Administration hospitals long hours of work form the chief problems as the year goes out, a problem that was there when the year came in; 12-hour tours of duty on the night force are by no means uncommon . . . In this connection, Kentucky department commanders of the American Legion, V. F. W., and others are urging the V. A. to employ vets as attendants when possible; but they want conditions improved before shunting their members in . . . They want salaries increased on a $1,500 minimum; a more liberal promotion policy for attendants, a discontinuance of subsistence charges and an eight-hour shift for attendants, with a maximum 44 hours a week . . . The A. F. G. E. is making a strong stand to obtain the night differential for certain groups of employes, meaning a higher rate for those who work at night . . . This now exists in some branches, notably in the postal service, but it does not apply to postoffice custodial employes. The law was passed in 1928, before this group was under the Postoffice Department.

Silver Spring Pilot Is Reported Better

Joseph W. Mitchell, 23-year-old Silver Spring pilot, who suffered brain concussion and a possible skull fracture when a plane he was piloting crashed 40 feet from the ground at Everett, Pa., Sunday, was reported out of danger yesterday by physicians at the Everett Hospital.

With a friend, Harvey Brown, 22, also of Silver Spring, Mitchell was at the controls of a private plane which had taken off early Sunday for Chicago from Congressional Airport. Brown was unhurt. The pair landed at Everett Airport for refueling; then, in the plane, a Travelair, reached the 40-foot altitude before the crash.

Bob Burns Says—

I was out in my back yard today, throwin' some little hunks of bread to a bunch of blackbirds and I couldn't help noticin' how much alike these birds were. People are a whole lot the same way and many a successful man owes it all to the fact that he got the "jump" on the other fella.

I had two cousins down home who were in love with the same girl and both of 'em were trying' thei. best to marry her. One night one of 'em was sittin' on the sofa with her and he put his arm around her and he says, "Milly, you're the first thing I think of when I get up in the morning." She says "Well, your brother told me the same thing." And he says "Yeah, but I get up a half hour before he does."

New Methods Of Fish-Curing Will Be Shown

Charles Jackson, of Bureau of Fisheries, to Speak at Rossbourg Inn.

Use of light in killing bacteria and "controlled smoke" for curing fish will be demonstrated for fish experts here January 1 by Charles L. Jackson, deputy commissioner of the Bureau of Fisheries. His demonstrations will be given at a meeting of the fishery advisory committee, a sub-committee of the Business Advisory Council, appointed to advise the Department of Commerce on its fisheries program.

The demonstrations will be held at Rossbourg Inn, first stop north of Washington on the stage route to Philadelphia and New York in the eighteenth century. Luncheon will be given the committee at the University of Maryland.

Among honor guests at the Mayflower Hotel dinner will be Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, and Frank T. Bell, commissioner of the Bureau of Fisheries.

Demonstrations and discussions will include nutrition studies on fish protein and fish oils and evaluation of minerals in fishery products. At the University of Maryland luncheon only fish products, topped with Maryland terrapin, will be served, Dr. H. C. Byrd, president, told the committee.

The committee is composed of representatives of the fisheries industry from all sections of the United States. As one feature of the entertainment program of its meeting it will see "Sealskins on Parade," a review of fur fashions for the last 15 years and a modern mermaid.

D. C. Visitor Shot On Steps at Home Of Yule Hostess

Dr. Amos A. Westrater, Martinsburg, W. Va., dentist, was shot and wounded seriously late yesterday at 4418 Fourteenth street northwest, where he and his wife, Mrs. Ethel Westrater, had been visiting Mrs. Grace Smith for the holidays.

A moment later there was a report of a .32 calibre pistol, and Leda Tatum, colored maid, found Dr. Westrater lying on steps leading to the basement. Police said they believed Dr. Westrater had shot himself.

At Emergency Hospital physicians said the dentist had a chance to recover. Dr. and Mrs. Westrater were to have gone home today.

Maimed Boy's Fate Cited as Warning

Thirteen-year-old Robert Kraeski is minus the thumb and two fingers of his left hand today as the result of playing with a dynamite cap on Christmas Eve at his home, 708 Main street, Laurel, Md., but he and his family are thankful that he is alive, and want to warn boys and girls everywhere to be careful of unknown objects that pique their curiosity.

Several days before Christmas, Robert, a student at St. Mildred's Parochial School, went into a nearby woods to search for a Christmas tree. He got both the tree and the cap. As the family prepared for festivities Christmas Eve, he pricked the cap with a pin and it exploded, maiming Robert and shaking the house.

Dr. Bryan P. Warren saved the boy's sight, and reported yesterday he was well on the way to recovery.

"We want children everywhere to realize how really lucky Robert was," said his mother, Mrs. Michael Kraeski, mother of five other children and wife of a carpenter, yesterday. "Robert might have been killed or blinded, the house might have been blown down. We want everyone to be careful of things mysterious and unfamiliar."

Earl A. Nash Joins Birthday Ball Unit

Acceptance by Earl A. Nash, of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., of the chairmanship of the publicity committee for the President's Birthday Ball January 29 was announced yesterday by District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the general ball committee.

Nash began organization of his committee with the selection of Wilmot R. Squier, advertising manager of the Washington Gas Light Co. and president of the Advertising Club, as vice chairman, and Harry Hites as secretary.

This year's ball will follow the same general lines of the 1937 affair with dancing at seven of the city's leading hotels and with, in addition, a series of athletic contests, all aimed to raise funds to aid a Nation-wide fight on infantile paralysis. Assisting Hazen as chairman of the general committee is Richmond B. Keech, of the Public Utilities Commission, as executive vice chairman.

Lincoln Tunnel Speeds Trip to Mid-New York

Washington motorists bound for New York's midtown and theater districts can reach them most efficiently by driving up U. S. Highway No. 1 to Weehawken, N. J., and passing under the Hudson River through the new Lincoln Tunnel, the Keystone Automobile Club said yesterday.

Motorists wishing to reach downtown New York should continue using the Holland Tunnel, the club said, and those headed for New England should continue on No. 1 to the George Washington Bridge, crossing to 178th street in New York.

Leukemia Cause Found; Also Serum For Possible Cure

Indianapolis, Dec. 27 (AP).—Discovery in animals, and probably in humans, of the mysterious cause of leukemia, sometimes called "blood cancer," a disease always fatal, was reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today by Dr. M. W. Emmel, of the University of Florida.

He said he had been able to produce leukemia in seven different species of animals, and with 11 different substances. For the animals he reported he had developed a serum which cured them in the majority of cases.

Dr. Emmel did not report on human beings. But it is known that the leukemia serum has been tried on four humans with possibly "favorable indications."

Father to Fight Incurable Illness Dissolving Bones

Akron, Ohio, Dec. 27 (U.P.).—Thomas Lloyd, his body so frail that a sudden turn might cause a multiple bone fracture, said he would "fight it out" when his physician told him tonight that a rare bone disease he suffers would take his life within three years.

"I'm too young to die, I can't give up. I'll fight this to the end," Lloyd, 35-year-old father of three sons, told Dr. G. M. Stevenson, who said there was no known cure for his disease—multiple myelomata—an affliction which slowly destroys the marrow of the bone, leaving the outer shell to grow soft and finally to dissolve. Lloyd, an electrician, was stricken two months ago.

Virginia to Assign Teachers for CCC

By the Associated Press.

The Civilian Conservation Corps said yesterday the vocational division of the Virginia State department of education had taken initial steps toward assignment of 25 trade and industrial instructors to CCC camps in Virginia.

The CCC announcement said Dr. B. H. Van Gelt, State supervisor of trade and industrial education, had asked J. M. Tignor, CCC district educational adviser, to survey State camps to determine possibilities for industrial training and to what extent they might utilize instructors.

Corps headquarters said co-operation between the State Department of Education and the camp educational program would afford thousands of CCC enrollees improved training, making each man more employable.

Peery Spares Huffman From Death in Chair

Richmond, Va., Dec. 27 (AP).—Gov. Peery today commuted the death penalty of Sylvan Huffman, convicted slayer of W. H. Riddle, Augusta County merchant, to life imprisonment after receiving a report from the Board of Mental Hygiene declaring Huffman not sane at this time.

Two States Act To Cut Auto Toll Over Week-End

Maryland and Virginia Move to Halt Another Carnage.

By the Associated Press.

Counting a toll of 32 traffic deaths in Maryland and Virginia over the yuletide holidays, State police of the two States acted tonight to prevent a repetition of the carnage over the New Year's week-end.

Latest reports show that 17 died in Maryland and 15 in Virginia. Injured in the two States surpassed the 100-mark.

State Police Capt. Edward McK. Johnson called last night for complete reports on the deaths which marred Maryland's week-end, promising State troopers would bend every effort to cut the New Year's week-end toll.

He said each substation near the scene of a fatal Christmas accident was ordered to turn in a summary to headquarters, to supply information for next week-end's holiday patrol.

Virginia State police, pointing to the heavy toll, have asked motorists to co-operate in reducing the New Year's death list by driving carefully, particularly on ice-coated highways and in congested areas of cities and towns.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 27 (U.P.).—The State board of pardons, which has never allowed a New Jersey woman to die in the electric chair, today commuted the death sentence of Mrs. Marguerite Fox Dolbow to life imprisonment.

It also commuted the death sentence of Norman Driscoll, who, with Mrs. Dolbow, was convicted of killing her husband for a $40,000 insurance policy.

Unions Will Continue Tokyo Goods Boycott

Richmond, Va., Dec. 27 (AP).—H. M. Monahan, American Federation of Labor organizer here, said today organized labor had not stopped its "boycott" of Japanese goods and that union workers would continue to refrain from purchasing Japanese goods and products of other "low-wage" countries.

He said he felt it was "not only our individual right but our collective right to refuse to trade with those we feel are pursuing a policy inimical to our individual and collective welfare."
